Grass-Based Systems Can Improve Farm Image, Profit

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — Grass-based dairy, beef, and sheep farms, by their nature, can not only be profitable, but project a positive, acceptable image to the community, according to a consensus of producers and agri-industry representatives.

During a Wednesday portion of the two-day 2001 Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference at the Grantville Holiday Inn, discussion groups looked toward ways to not only preserve farmland, but also the farmer himself.

According to one Penn State ag easement analyst, in one survey conducted last summer, 25 of the farmer respondents did not know how their land would be used in the next 10 years.

Tim Kelsey, assistant professor of ag economics in the Penn State Department of Agricultural Economics and Rural Sociology, said the survey, funded by the Center for Rural Pennsylvania, Harrisburg, was mailed to 2,000 farmers in the southeast portion of the state. About eight of the top 10 agricultural production counties participated on a variety of farms.

Kelsey said that, in his preliminary report presented Wednesday at the conference, about 600 farmers responded to the survey, or about 33 percent. The final report will be published in about two weeks.

Answers, according to Kelsey, were astounding: about eight percent of the respondents told Penn State that in 10 years their land, for certain, would be in development or commercial use.

However, sixty-three percent of the respondents believed that the land would be actively farmed. About 2.9 percent believed the land would lie fallow.

A quarter of the respondents believed they had no idea how their farmland would be used in the next 10 years. Would it be headed to development? Kelsey noted. "Probably," he said.

Pennsylvania ranks sixth nationally in the total farmland lost per year, larger than 44 other states. "And we're losing farmland at a faster rate than before," Kelsey said.

Most of the losses came in some of the best ag land in the state, in the east and southeast.

Though Kelsey was careful to point out he wasn't criticizing easement purchase plans, development rights sold to trust, preferred taxing, and the right to farm laws, he believed that though the plans preserved farmland, they didn't preserve the farmer.

"Nothing specific has been developed to help the farm business itself to survive," he said.

Checklists, Consumer Trends, Disease Control At Poultry Day

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Taking a day off from farming proved profitable for area producers as they were educated on a wide range of topics at Thursday's Poultry Progress Day.

Sponsored by Penn State cooperative extension and the Lancaster County Poultry Association, the event drew a roomfull of producers, sponsors, and other industry representatives to the Farm and Home Center.

Risk Assesment

Andy Bradford, secretary of the Lancaster County Poultry Association, chaired the morning session. Dr. Robert Owen, Hubbard ISA representative, outlined a risk assessment tool for safety from transmissible infectious diseases, parasites, and pests — in a word, biosecurity.

"You need to draw a line in the sand between disease organisms and a healthy flock. Wherever you draw the line is where you take your stand and eliminate risk and prevent disease from entering," he said.

Bradford presented details on a tool which provides an objective approach to help producers manage risk. Goals of the risk assessment tool are to establish a farm ranking based on the risk potentials. Operators reduce risk by lowering the score.

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Corn Talk, the newsletter of the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association (PMCGA), is included in this issue of Lancaster Farming. The issue features the winners of the Five-Acre Corn Club contest, an interview with operators of a regional grain elevator, and other information pertinent to the corn grower. Also included are comments from the PMCGA and advertising messages. PMCGA directors met here at this year's Ag Progress Days. Penn State Economists Evaluate Dairy Fairness Bill

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — A pending dairy bill designed to provide a safety net for dairy farm families would provide increased support when market prices are low, according to a study by two dairy economists from Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

The study also suggests that the bill would provide greater support to small and medium-sized dairy farms.

Kenneth Bailey, associate professor of dairy marketing and policy, and James Dunn, professor of agricultural economics, present these conclusions in "Economic Analysis of the National Dairy Farmers Fairness Act of 2001," a report released this week.

The National Dairy Farmers Fairness Act of 2001 was proposed by U.S. Senators Rick Santorum of Pennsylvania and Herb Kohl of Wisconsin to create a sliding scale of financial assistance for small and medium-sized dairy operations.

"The bill provides for a supplemental payment to dairy farmers when the national average price of Class III milk — milk used to make cheese — falls below a certain level," Dunn said. "The program essentially provides some price pro-

Report Supplied By USDA

Midweek trucklot buying interest was light as dealers remained cautious and continued to work on a hand-to-mouth basis. Offerings of boneless skinless breasts were at least adequate to available, and bone-in in breasts ranged adequate to balanced. Wings continued to see strong interest and were clearing well, and boneless-skinless thigh meat was no more than adequate. Movement through retail and distributive channels was only fair, however, foodservice sectors were actively drawing product from the market. The market tone was fully steady to instances firm on wings and boneless-skinless thigh meat, at least steady on the balance.

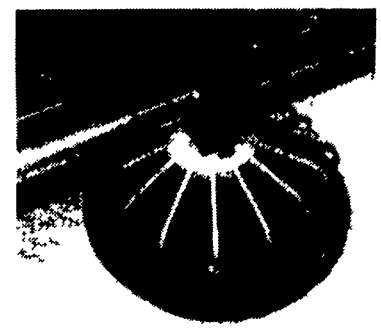
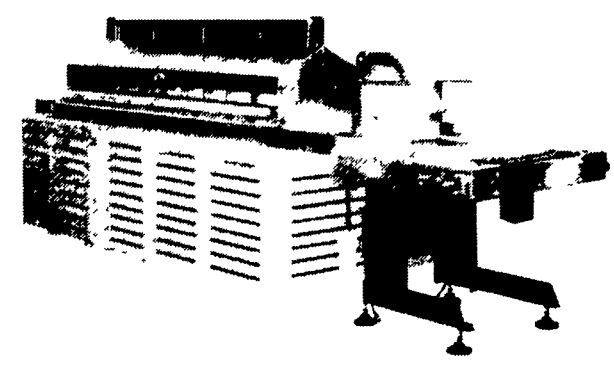
Pax

Boosts Your Efficiency and Products with these Innovative Products...

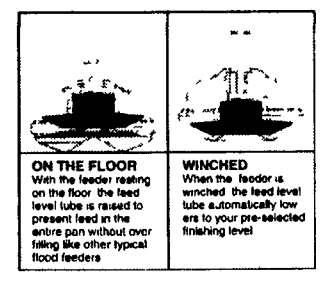




QUICK-START

The Pax QUICK-START™ pan feeding system grows chicks into FINISHED broilers efficiently.

Start chicks with the feeder resting on the floor and the feed pan entirely filled. The Pax QUICK-START™ pan provides easy access to plenty of fresh feed – with no accumulation of stale feed in the drop tube – attracting even the smallest chicks to begin feeding right away



ON THE FLOOR
With the feeder resting on the floor the feed level tube is raised to present feed in the entire pan without over filling like other typical flood feeders
WINCHED
When the feeder is winched the feed level tube automatically lowers to your pre-selected finishing level

SIDE BELT MECHANICAL EGG COLLECTION SYSTEM

Mechanical Nest

- Side belt design allows front access for egg collection in the event of a power failure
- Hinged closeout lid to restrict access
- Ventilated partitions allow fresh air flow through each nest
- Anti-roost guard with folded edges on all nests

- Choice of 1/2 or 3/4 HP motor

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

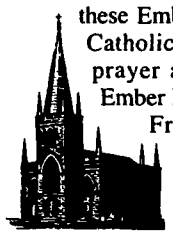
MOON RIDES HIGH, MARCH 5

READING THE EMBERS

The first set of this year's twelve Ember Days, said to indicate the weather for the coming year, occur on March 7, 9, and 10—the first Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday following the first Sunday in Lent. The weather on Wednesday represents that of April, Friday's weather prognosticates that for May, and Saturday's weather will tell us about June. Historically, four sets of these Ember Days were set aside in the Roman Catholic and Anglican churches for fasting, prayer and the ordination of clergy. Other Ember Days this year will be the Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays that follow Whitsunday (or Pentecost) on June 3; Holy Cross, always September 14; and the Feast of St. Lucy on December 13.



As it rains in March, so it rains in June.

TIP OF THE WEEK

BABOOTIE

2 pounds any combination of ground beef, pork, or lamb
2 onions, chopped
1 pound canned tomatoes
1-1/2 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons curry
2 tablespoons vinegar
salt
2 firm bananas, peeled and sliced
1 apple, peeled, cored, and chopped
2 tablespoons apricot jam or 1 can apricots
1/4 cup slivered almonds
1 cup tomato juice, for thinning

Brown meat, drain off fat, sauté onion, then combine all ingredients and simmer for a half hour. Thin with tomato juice, as needed, and serve over rice. Can be made in a crock pot.

Makes 8 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

A damp, rotten March brings pain to farmers.

March grass never did good.

If it does not freeze on the 10th, a fertile year may be expected.

OPINION

Interdisciplinary

College students are required to study a wide variety of subject matter, some of which doesn't seem to have any connection to their chosen study or profession. They often ask, "Why do I have to learn about this? I'll never use this in my career."

But as we mature and learn about the world and how it works, we realize that a widened horizon contributes to the knowledgeable, well-rounded businessperson.

At my alma mater, Temple University, there was a course entitled "Freshman Interdisciplinary Studies," or FIS for short.

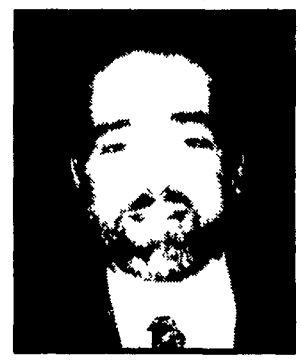
Likewise, with farming, many families may agree that FIS can be a good philosophy. Children who want to manage the farm are wise to initially take a job in a nonfarm area, or to take up a mission in another part of the world, simply to gain the much-needed and well-regarded perspective so essential to farm survival.

The idea is: first learn other businesses and how they operate. Then take that knowledge and bring it to the farm.

Before college, I worked on a neighbor's farm. I learned a lot of business sense from the farmer, but I also learned a lot about nonfarm business outside of farming after college. And businesses do operate much the same way.

I think having that "interdisciplinary" perspective is a good idea.

Over the years, I have spoken with many farm families who simply won't allow their children to manage aspects of the farm until those children first venture into the nonfarm world and spend some time there, taking up another occupation, or managing a nonfarm business. Certainly the experience can provide a deeper and more lifelasting commitment to the importance — the very philosophy — of farming as a business.



Now Is The Time

By Leon Ressler

Lancaster County Extension Director

To Say Hello

It is an honor to be given the opportunity to follow in the footsteps of John Schwartz and those who preceded him in Lancaster County.

I have been an extension agent in Lancaster County for the past 13 years. My efforts have been focused in programs related to environmental issues in agriculture. This has included working with nutrient management, manure marketing, composting, water quality, water rights, and nuisance issues.

I have had the opportunity to meet many of you over the years and I look forward to many future opportunities to work with the agricultural community. Although agriculture is facing many challenges today, there are many exciting possibilities as well. I will do my best to keep you up to date with the information you need to be successful in the days ahead as our world changes rapidly.

To Apply For Crop Insurance

The final date for applying for crop insurance for spring planted crops is March 15, 2001.

Any farmer who received disaster payments for a 1999 crop is committed to purchasing crop insurance for both the 2000 and 2001 crops.

Failure to purchase the insurance will result in a $200 penalty per crop. If your insurance agent does not handle crop insurance, contact your local Farm Service Agency office for a list of agents who carry the insurance.

To Attend The College Of Agricultural Sciences Open House

Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences will conduct an open house for future students and their families on Saturday, March 31.

This is an excellent opportunity for high school students who are considering a career in agricultural sciences to become familiar with the programs available at Penn State.

Future students will be able to interact with deans, faculty, and current students. The morning session includes an overview of majors and minors available, scholarships, clubs, organizations, and societies, internships, undergraduate research, and education abroad. Then there will be tours of agricultural research and teaching facilities for each department.

Visitors will have the opportunity to sample residence hall food with brunch in East or North halls. In the afternoon, there will be presentations on various careers in agricultural sciences and a panel discussion with recent alumni. There will also be a bus tour as well as a walking tour of campus.

A residence hall tour and a bus tour of the large animal facility will be available in the afternoon schedule. Don't miss this opportunity to learn more about undergraduate opportunities at Penn State. For more information or to register, call (814) 865-7521.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W ALTHOUSE

THE WAITING ROOM

Background Scripture:
Acts 1.
Devotional Reading:
John 16:7-14.

What a dramatic reversal the disciples of Jesus experienced — from the gloom of Good Friday to the unbelievable joy of Easter Sunday!

We can understand their euphoria and the expectancy with which they asked the Risen Lord: "Lord, will you at this time restore the kingdom to Israel?" (Acts 1:6).

It seems to me that the experience of Christ's resurrection had not made them a whole lot more understanding: they still thought that Jesus' messianic purpose was to restore the kingdom of Israel. They were looking for a change in the secular realm: vanquish Rome and restore Israel as an independent nation once again. It seems that they expected this to take place instantaneously. Just say the word, Lord; we are ready!

So Jesus' reply may have come to them as a shock: "It is not for you to know the times or seasons which the Father has fixed by his own authority. But you shall receive power when the Holy Spirit has come upon you; and you shall be my witnesses in Jerusalem and in all Judea and Samaria and to the end of the earth" (7,8). The answer Jesus gave them was the very one that people do not want to hear: Wait! Be patient!

Learn To Wait

In his poem, "The Reaper and the Flowers," Longfellow says:

Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labour and to wait.

Most of us don't have to be persuaded to achieve, pursue, and labor, but many of us have never learned to wait. Patience may be our poorest subject. Yet the patience to wait for God to fulfill his promises is an essential ingredient of faith.

For centuries the Hebrews prayed: How long, oh Lord?. The Psalmists realized the importance of patience: ". . . those who wait for the Lord shall possess the land" (Ps. 37:9. See also Ps. 25:3,5; 40:1; 62:1; 130:5,6.) And also the prophet Isaiah: ". . . blessed are all they that wait for him" (30:18) and ". . . but they who wait for the Lord shall renew their strength" (40:31).

Impatience often clouded the understanding of Jesus' disciples. Like us, they often wanted his promises fulfilled yesterday. In one of his parables, he tells them to "be like men who are waiting for their master to come home from the marriage feast" (Lk.12:36).

After his resurrection, Jesus tells his disciples: "And behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you; but stay in the city until you are clothed with power from on high" (Lk.24:49), a command which he repeats, charging them "not to depart from Jerusalem, but to wait for the promise of the Father . . ." (Acts 1:4).

Divine "Long Run'

One reason we mortals are so impatient is that we are mortals. Our sense of time is so different from that of our Creator. We know that, of course, but it is still difficult for us to see time in terms of the divine long haul instead of the human short haul.

An old rabbinic story tells us that one day Abraham saw an old man weary with age and travel, coming toward him. In his usual manner, Abraham greeted him, washed his feet, and invited him to supper. But, observing during supper that the man did not offer a prayer of thanksgiving, Abraham asked him why he did not worship God and the old man told him that he worshipped only fire.

Upon hearing this, Abraham withdrew his hospitality and sent the man into the night. But God came to Abraham and admonished him: "I have suffered him these eighty years although he dishonored Me, and couldst thou not endure him one night?" This is reminiscent of what Jesus said to his sleeping disciples in Gethsemane, "Could you not watch one hour?" (Mk. 14:38).

We are wrong if we think that "waiting" is the equivalent of not doing anything. When we are waiting for God, we are doing something: we are actively practicing our faith. That's what the disciples did when, after the resurrection, they returned to the upper room, where they practiced the deep levels of their faith while they waited for the promise of the Father. For them and us, the upper room becomes the waiting room.

Compared to last week: Feeder steers steady to 1.00 higher. Feeder heifers and stocker steers steady. Stocker heifers steady to 3.00 lower. Demand continues good for feeder cattle and stocker steers. However, upcoming winter storms have dampened demand to moderate for stocker heifers. Grazing cattle supply continues to be split between thin dried-out cattle and medium flesh cattle. Receipts continue depressed as wheat pasture has been sparse to non-existent this season throughout Oklahoma and northern Texas. Weigh-ups average to gaunt. Special stock cow sale to be held Thursday, March 15, 2001.

Slaughter cows 1.00-1.50 higher. Slaughter bulls steady to 1.00 higher. Packer demand continues very good for light receipts. Total of 235 cows and bulls sold with 45 percent going to packers. Receipts this week 6575; last week 5659; last year 11,971.

Supply consisted of 59 percent yearlings over 600 lbs; 37 percent calves and light yearlings under 600 lbs; 4 percent cows and bulls. Heifers comprised 39 percent of feeder and calf supply.

Prices follow with weighted average weight and price in parenthesis.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

Ken Bailey
Penn State
Feb. 23, 2001

Markets Remain Firm

- Butter stocks lower
- Cheese and butter prices higher
- Advanced prices announced
- Analysis of Santorum/Kohl Bill

Butter prices reached $1.5025 per pound this week. According to USDA, "many continue to question if the supply/demand situation warrants such a firm price for this time of year." The answer to that is "yes."

Butter production increased just enough last year to meeting growth in demand. This occurred when there was a 3.0 percent growth in the milk supply.

It now appears that the milk supply in 2001 will slow. That means butter production will be a limiting factor in the milk market during 2001.

Just look at the inventory situation. Butter prices rallied last Thanksgiving due in part to strong demand. USDA's most recent Cold Storage report indicates that December 31, 2000 stocks were down 3.9 percent compared to a year ago. That same report shows January 31, 2001 stocks are down 20.1 percent relative to a year ago. Demand for butter must be good, and production appears limited. Butter demand is firm right now due to seasonal purchasing for the upcoming Easter/Passover holidays.

Cheese prices also strengthened this week. Block prices rose from $1.28 per pound on Tuesday, February 20 to $1.30 by Friday, February 23. Barrel prices rose from $1.25 per pound on Tuesday to $1.27 by Friday. The Cold storage report indicates that December 31, 2000 revised stocks of American cheese were up 14.1 percent over a year ago and January 31, 2001 stocks were down 0.6 percent. Clearly current prices are firm due to fears regarding the future milk supply.

USDA announced advanced prices today under the federal order system. The base price for Class I milk for March 2001 is $12.65 per cwt. That price is derived from the advanced Class IV skim milk pricing factor of

Chester County Holstein Club Sets Tour

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.) — The Chester County Holstein Club has planned a tour Thursday, March 15, to Somerset County.

The group will have several departure places this year. These places include the Sam Stoltzfus Farm of Parkesburg at 7:15 a.m., Amos Stoltzfus Farm of Honeybrook at 7:30 a.m., and the parking lot is back of the Burger King at Morgantown at 7:45 a.m.

Cost is $15 and you are to bring a packed lunch. Supper will be provided by Monsanto Company.

The tour includes farms such as Pennwood Farms (Harvey Stoltzfus Family) which moved to Somerset County from Chester County. The Stoltzfus's milk 470 cows in a rotary parlor, which was recently built, and farm close to 700 acres. They also have a few Jerseys in the herd. They have several 2-year-olds milking, which are sired by Rudolph, Formation, Dusters, Jolts, and more.

Another farm is The Robert and Joyce Hoffman Farm. This farm features several Excellent cows including a 92 pt. Benchmark daughter which has five generation Ex. behind her. They also have several Rudolph's and Fred daughters and another Ex. daughter of Winken. They also have recently purchased a heifer from the Ricecrest Herd. This farm has been in the family for nine generations.

Bervalon Farms features a good group of cows which are primarily Canadian sired. This operation farms 550 acres and milks 120 cows in a stanchion barn and houses the cows in a newly constructed freestall barn. Some highlights here are an Ex. Lindy daughter as well as daughters of Storm, Rudolph, Leader and others. The Cardelle Farm has a nice looking herd of cows also. Some of the features here is a Starz daughter that has four generations Ex. behind her. Other cows include an 86 pt. Prescott and daughters of Juror, Megabuck, Airliner, Mathie and two Ex. Blackstars. They have a BAA of 106.4 percent.

The Lautich Farm milks 120 cows and farms 450 acres. They also have a good group of cows. Some highlights here are several milking Fatal daughters, as well as daughters of Storm, Marty, Bond, Patron, and an Ex.

Dairy Day Draws 450

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

EAST SMITHFIELD (Bradford Co.) — Free health screenings, informational programs, and fun events drew about 450 people to the annual dairy day program Monday, Feb. 19, at S.R.U. School.

For the first year, the growing program, sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension and industry representatives, targeted farmers in both Bradford and Sullivan counties.

"We've tried to include them more in our programs because there aren't as many dairy farms in Sullivan County," said Gary Hennip, Bradford County dairy agent.

Hennip also commented that the annual program has turned into a fun event with the ever-growing pie auction and ample time to visit with industry representatives from all facets of the dairy industry, as well as other farmers. This year's pie auction averaged $50 per pie with Joyce Taylor's winning confection bringing a price of $150 from Morressey Insurance.

Nineteen pies were judged, raising $995, which will be shared between the 4-H dairy program and the dairy princess program, less $100 in prize money for the entrants.

"We've got a lot more life in Dairy Day," noted Hennip. "It's kind of a fun day."

Although dairy princesses served up gallons and gallons of free ice cream and sponsored a

Bradford County Dairy Agent Gary Hennip prepares to auction off the 19 pies entered in the annual pie auction. Money raised supports both the Bradford County 4-H dairy program as well as the Dairy Princess Program.

$7.86 per cwt and the advanced butterfat pricing factor of $1.4483 per pound. The Class II skim milk price for March is $8.56 per cwt.

And finally, Penn State released a report this week, "Economic Analysis of the National Dairy Farmers Fairness Act of 2001." The report analyzed a bill proposed by Senators Rick Santorum of Pennsylvania and Herb Kohl of Wisconsin.

The bill provides for a supplemental payment to dairy farmers when the national average price of Class III milk — milk used to make cheese — falls below a certain level.

The bill has two unique features. First, the size of the supplemental payment is tied to general market conditions. That means producers in the Northeast and Southeast, where most milk is used for bottling purposes, can benefit as well as producers in the Midwest and West, where more milk is used to make cheese.

Second, the bulk of the payments are targeted to small and medium-sized dairy operations that have fewer than 150 cows. That's beneficial to many states that have large numbers of small family farms, like Pennsylvania. For example, a 'general' payment rate of 50 cents per hundred pounds (cwt.) of milk is made when the annual average Class III price of milk is below $10.50 per hundredweight. The Class III price of milk averaged about $9.74 in 2000. An additional payment of 30 cents per hundred pounds of milk is made if a producer did not expand milk production from the previous year.

That makes the maximum payment under the dairy fairness bill equal to 80 cents per hundredweight. — a significant price increase. For a farm with 75 cows shipping 1.26 million pounds a year, they could receive $6,290 if they expanded and $10,065 if they did not.

The complete report is available online at http://www.aers.psu.edu/dairyoutlook/reports/SantorumBill/Study.htm.

Nitrogen Costs, Soybean Seed Challenge Crop Planters

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — Think rolling energy blackouts in California have no impact on the East Coast farming community?

Think again.

As natural gas prices have escalated across the country, energy producers are scrambling for supplies.

One place they reportedly obtained scarce natural gas is from firms which normally use gas to produce nitrogen fertilizers.

As a result, suppliers warn that nitrogen production is down this spring and costs have blasted sky-high.

Some area growers have already bought their spring needs of nitrogen. Some are looking at alternatives, such as sources of manure. Some are simply planning to use less, or none at all.

"Nitrogen is the bone in the craw of producers this year," said George Williams, owner of Codorus Fertilizer Service in southwestern York County. "Costs are being driven by energy, especially natural gas, which is the first item you start with in the nitrogen production cycle."

Williams concurs with recent news reports, that some large domestic producers of nitrogen fertilizer have resold their supplies of natural gas to help fill energy production demands.

"Worldwide, there is less nitrogen being manufactured because it was not real profitable in the past. A lot of plants were shut down and manufacturers need a couple of months lead time to gear them back up," said the fertilizer supplier.

While there has been some speculation among farmers that the nitrogen shortage is contrived to generate higher profits for manufacturers, Williams sees it as a genuine supply-demand problem. That crunch shows no signs of quick improvement, especially heading into the upcoming months when planting puts a heavy demand on nationwide stocks of nitrogen.

According to Williams, urea fertilizer price one year ago was running about $160 per ton. A ton of the high-nitrogen dry urea will cost growers upward of $265 per ton. Urea is a 46 percent nitrogen product, supplying 920 pounds of nitrogen per ton, or 2,000 pounds of material.

Liquid nitrogen, by comparison, is a 30 percent material providing 600 pounds of actual nitrogen per ton. Costs of liquid nitrogen have comparably climbed, from a February 2000 cost of $110-115 per ton to a recent quote in the $185-190 range.

Exploding nitrogen costs was an issue on the minds of growers attending the annual York County corn clinic earlier this month.

The father-son partnership of John Marstellar, Sr. and Jr., Stewartstown, who raise 800 acres of corn, got a little ahead of the cost curve on their spring supplies of nitrogen. Aware that the price was on a serious upswing, the Marstellars not only bought ahead, they also added extra on-farm storage for their nitrogen needs.

Fawn Grove area grower Bob Morris has also laid in his spring order of nitrogen. He related visiting with another producer who was on the search for supplies of poultry manure to replace high-cost nitrogen fertilizer.

"I'll cut back, probably about 25 percent, if prices stay high," said Don Glatfelter, Mount Wolf. Galtfelter, who raises about 125 acres of corn and 100 of soybeans, figures that is will take a better price for corn than the current level before he could justify upping his nitrogen use any more.

Rodney Eisenhart, Thomasville, plans to minimize nitrogen needs by growing his corn in former soybean fields. Not a new plan for Eisenhart, the rotation pattern just continues a program he has used in prior years. Like many York area farmers, Eisenhart has recently lost some rented acreage to urban sprawl, also cutting his cash layout for nitrogen in this high-cost year.

Dairyman Henry Dehoff, Dallastown, may cut back nitrogen use, but no more than 10 percent. He is concerned, however, that the short supplies may prevent their family dairy operation from getting all the nitrogen they might want for the 500 acres they normally plant, even with slightly reduced application rates.

Manure availability is a boon for farmers raising livestock or poultry since, such as Airville dairy producer Harry Bickel. They can supplement added nitrogen with applications of natural fertilizer. Brian Baer, across the county at Glen Rock, figures on doing the same with barnyard buildup from the family's beef cattle herd.

"We'll be pretty careful with it," said retired dairyman Bob Stewart, Airville, summing up the general feeling about nitrogen applications in the 2001 growing season voiced by most growers attending the crop clinic.

York extension agronomist Mark Goodson has encouraged corn growers, if possible, to split their nitrogen applications. Put some down as a seedling-starter boost, then come back in when corn is ready to make its big growth push in mid-summer with a sidedressing, if possible.

Since nitrogen very readily leaches out of the soil and into the environment, including groundwater, splitting applications is doubly beneficial. Not only does it give the crop a double-whammy of nutrient, it does it in smaller amounts, less likely to go to waste. Also, costs of nitrogen are expected to take somewhat of a drop once the spring planting season is past, allowing later applications at a lower impute cost.

"A lot of our clients say they may cut back in nitrogen application," said ag lender John Eaton of Peoples' Bank. "Levels of nitrogen in many fields in the area are pretty good, since it's been fairly inexpensive in the past. And, some say they'll switch to planting soybeans instead."

Even that plan, warns Cordorus Fertilizer's Williams, may have its pitfalls this year.

"There's a definite shortage of soybean seed this year," he said. "Seed beans would have been short this year, even without more farmers planting beans instead of corn."

Poor conditions at harvest, with prolonged wet weather in many cases, left the outer skin of soybean seeds more thin and delicate than usual. That thinness will cause the coats to crack and the seeds shatter more readily than normal, resulting in reduced germination rates. Those likely low germination rates, coupled with a short supply, are combining to aggravate the situation.

And, Williams said, soybean seeds are rated according to planting length, from the shorter-season beans used in Canada and New England to much longer-length season beans such as might be planted in Virginia. And the "Group 3" bean, probably the most-popular, season-length seed for the middle-Atlantic region, seems to be one of the shortest in availability.

While longer-season beans will grow and mature under normal middle-Atlantic growing conditions, Williams advises that they absolutely need to be planted early to take advantage of the entire growing season and mature completely.

Couple the lower germination rate with fewer seed beans to begin with, and farmers are looking at a shortage of the seed they might readily switch to in order to avoid the high nitrogen impute costs for corn acres.

With possible shortages of high-priced nitrogen and less abundant supplies of lower-germination soybeans, area farmers find their own ways to deal with the particular set of challenges the 2001 crop year offers.

"If the weather delays planting in the southern states and the whole East Coast opens up at the same time, we could have a real problem," said Williams. "If planting season is normal, we'll probably be okay. I'm afraid no one has a real handle on what's happening."

NFU's 99th Anniversary Convention In Rochester

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Robert F. Kennedy, Jr., president of the Water Keeper Alliance and son of the late U.S. senator and attorney general, will join hundreds of the nation's family farmers and ranchers in Rochester, N.Y., March 2-5, for National Farmers Union's (NFU) 99th anniversary convention at the Four Points Hotel.

U.S. Reps. Louise Slaughter, D-N.Y., and Maurice Hinchey, D-N.Y., are featured speakers for this year's event.

Kennedy will give the convention's keynote address on Friday evening, March 2, as a part of the opening session. His speech is scheduled for 8 p.m. Reps. Hinchey and Slaughter will each address the convention at a Sat., March 3, banquet that begins at 6:30 p.m.

"A new Congress signals a fresh start for the development of family farm and ranch policy," said Leland Swenson, president of NFU. "While some of the names and the balance of power are new, we face many of the same challenges that rural America saw as we began the last year."

"In March, we will gather to build on the momentum we created over the past year to address issues such as concentration, low prices and the reform of federal farm programs. We will also share with each other the information and expertise we have gained through our efforts to serve farm and ranch families throughout the year."

Sat., March 3 will also feature two important discussions. The morning discussion will address needed policy changes to the 1996 farm law. The afternoon will feature a farm leader roundtable where participants will discuss not only important policy, market and structural realities faced by farmers, but, also, important social and community concerns of rural citizens.

Sun., March 4 will feature several afternoon forums that will address the role of faith communities in the current rural, economic and social crisis, industrial concentration in agriculture and the food system, and trade challenges with China.

Delegates will consider and adopt the 2001 NFU policy program on Mon., March 5.

Milkers' Training School Offered

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — One of the important tasks to be performed on a dairy farm is milking cows. A Milkers' Training School will be held on Tues., March 13 at the Hershey Brothers farm north of Manheim.

The purpose of the school is to offer basic training to milkers and to demonstrate training techniques to those who manage the milking crew. Some of the topics to be addressed include: understanding the udder and the milk letdown process, proper udder preparation and milking procedures, producing high quality milk, preventing udder infections, animal handling and moving techniques, detecting and handling animals that need special attention, recording and reporting pertinent data, understanding the milking system, setting up the equipment for milking and proper cleanup after milking, responding to emergency problems with animals and equipment, etc. Anyone interested in milking is invited to attend.

Penn State encourages persons with disabilities to participate in its programs and activities. If you anticipate needing any type of accommodation or have questions about the physical access provided, please contact Glenn Shirk at (717) 394-6851 in advance of your participation or visit.

Attendance is by reservation only. This is a Capital Regional Extension program. Reservations can be made by calling the York County Extension office (717) 840-7408 and will be accepted on a first-come basis.

Easement Sellers Can Keep More

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Farmers selling agricultural conservation easements want to get the best price they can for their development rights.

But capital gains tax often takes a big portion of the sale price right off the closing table.

Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Sam Hayes announced that the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA) has a way for sellers to increase what they get to keep, and not just what they get, when selling easements.

Under a new option developed by PDA, farmers can sell easements using installment purchase agreements (IPAs) that defer all or part of the purchase price for up to 30 years. In the interim, sellers receive interest twice a year on the outstanding balance. As with a municipal bond, interest payments are exempt from federal and Pennsylvania state income taxes.

By deferring payment of the purchase price for up to 30 years, IPAs are designed to allow sellers to defer capital gains tax for a similar period. For many sellers, that means they'll never pay capital gains tax in their lifetimes. Heirs can sell IPAs in the municipal bond market as a way of paying estate taxes or capital gains taxes.

Capital gains tax is due when a seller receives payment for appreciated land or other assets. Capital gain is the difference between the sale price and the value of the property when it was first bought or inherited. The IRS taxes capital gains at a maximum rate of 20 percent and Pennsylvania at a maximum 2.8 percent rate.

Howard County, Maryland, has used 30-year IPAs to buy easements on 9,200 acres from 81 sellers since 1989. Similar programs are under way in Harford and Anne Arundel counties, Maryland; Virginia Beach, Virginia; and Burlington County, New Jersey.

PDA is recommending IPAs to county farmland preservation boards, because the structure minimizes cash needed to close on purchases. The rural character of many parts of Pennsylvania will be lost forever unless development rights are purchased soon. IPAs permit as many as five times more purchases in the short term than if cash were paid for each acquisition.

At the time farmers apply to their counties to sell development rights, they'll be asked to choose among an all-cash or installment purchase, or some combination of the two. After the terms of the sale are agreed upon, the purchase is submitted to PDA for approval. Closing can occur within six months of state approval.

Additional information regarding installment purchase can be obtained from each county farmland preservation board or by contacting Raymond C. Pickering, Director of PDA's Bureau of Farmland Preservation, at (717) 783-3167. To discuss tax treatment of easement sales, contact Michael W. Evanish, manger of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau's MSC Business Services, at (717) 731-3546 or mwevanish@pfb.com.

Toomey Receives Friends Of Farm Bureau Award

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — On Wednesday, Feb. 21, Congressman Pat Toomey (R-PA) was presented the "Friend of Farm Bureau Award" by the Lehigh County and Northampton/Monroe County Farm Bureau for his outstanding support of farmers and farm issues.

In accepting the award Toomey stated, "It is an honor to receive the Friend of Farm Bureau Award today. Over the past two years, Lehigh Valley farmers have given me very helpful advice and suggestions regarding agriculture policy. Whether we were fighting for Pennsylvania farmers during the drought of 1999 or working to open up new markets overseas for Lehigh Valley products — it was a pleasure working with the members of the Farm Bureau.

"I look forward to continuing to work with the Pennsylvania family farmers as Congress seeks to provide our farmers additional opportunities to sell their products both in the USA and across the globe. Additionally, I am excited about fighting to reduce the tax burden that currently harms our family farms by eliminating the death tax, reducing capital gains and creating Farm and Ranch Risk Management (FARRM) Accounts.

Using FARRM Accounts, farmers will be able to save 20 percent of their net farm income in a tax-deferred account to help them weather the ups and downs of each crop year. I will continue to work to keep the family farm a vital part of America."

Who Will Work Your Farm In The Future?
Roland P. Freund
Penn State
Farm Management

This is the question to be answered at the Franklin County Farm Management Forum scheduled March 6, beginning at 9 a.m.

The forum is designed to meet the interests and needs of the general farm audience — not enterprise specific. It is sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension and supported by Franklin County agribusiness organizations.

It will be at The Lighthouse Restaurant on Rt. 11 north of Chambersburg, approximately one mile south of Rt. 997.

Will there be a future for your farm? This is the first aspect of the question posed in the program title to be presented by Regional Farm Management Agent Roland Freund, discussing such succession issues as: Is there a next generation to take over the farm? Is the next generation building equity in the business? Is the next generation involved in management and decision-making?

Which farms will have a future? For a farm to have a future it needs to have certain attributes. Brad Hilty of Dairy Alliance will discuss how we can measure these and suggest benchmarks that managers can use to evaluate their own business resources, level of technology, solvency, profitability, and labor efficiency and availability.

The future farm workforce. There will be a panel to discuss how the future farm will be able to hire and retain good employees. The panelists include Ronald K. Statler, former partner in Statler Farms, Joseph S. Middour of Middour Farms, Waynesboro, Sam Miller of Franklin Feed and Supply Co. and Jerome K. Harness DVM of Franklin Veterinary Associates. The audience will have opportunities to raise questions with the panelists and speakers.

Organizing and managing the future workforce. Richard Stup of Dairy Alliance will discuss a general strategy for effective organization and management of a farm workforce.

The program will conclude at 2:30 p.m. with an ice cream send-off. The registration fee for the program, including buffet lunch, is $15 per individual and $10 for each additional person from the same family or organization.

To register and for further information, contact the Franklin County Extension Office, 191 Franklin Farm Lane, Chambersburg, PA 17201-3086 or call (717) 263-9226.

Land O'Lakes To Purchase Kraft's Cheese Plant

MELROSE, Minn. — Land O'Lakes, Inc. and Kraft Foods, Inc., recently announced that they have reached agreement for the purchase of the Kraft cheese plant in Melrose, Minn., as an ongoing operation.

Separately, Land O'Lakes and Dairy Farmers of America, Inc. (DFA) announced that they have reached agreement for a joint venture, Melrose Dairy Proteins LLC, which will own and operate the Melrose plant.

Located at 1,000 East Kraft Drive, the plant has approximately 150 employees and produces bulk cheese, which is shipped to other plants for further processing and packaging. The plant purchases over one billion pounds of milk per year.

As part of the agreement, Land O'Lakes will offer employment to the Melrose facility's workforce, and Kraft will purchase a portion of the plant's output. The sale price was not disclosed. The sale is expected to be final in early March. Kraft's manufacturing facilities in Albany and New Ulm, Minn., are not part of the transaction.

Officials of Land O'Lakes and DFA said the decision to form the joint venture reflects a strong, shared commitment to the Upper Midwest dairy industry and a focus on market access for member milk.

"This is driven in part by our two organizations' long-standing commitment to Upper Midwest dairying," said Jack Gherty, Land O'Lakes President and Chief Executive Officer. "Perhaps even more important, this joint venture illustrates our continued confidence in the ability of the Upper Midwest dairy industry to be competitive long-term. Our goal is to maintain and upgrade the region's dairy infrastructure, as well as to preserve market access for the region's dairy producers."

DFA President and Chief Executive Officer Gary Hanman said the new partnership is a very positive match. "As farmer-owned enterprises, we share specific cooperative values...like a commitment to producer profitability and productivity...which make our organizations very compatible partners," said Hanman. "A key aspect of our cooperative commitment is preserving market access for member milk, and this joint venture directly addresses that issue."

Officials at Kraft said they were pleased to find committed buyers for the plant. "Over the past year, we have looked for the best option for this plant, recognizing the changing dairy industry dynamics," said Tom Hedge, Vice President of Operations for Kraft's Central Area. "We believe this is the best outcome for our business, for the long-term viability of this plant, for our employees, milk patrons, haulers and the community. Land O'Lakes is retaining the expertise of a highly skilled, outstanding work force. And, because it is being purchased as an ongoing operation, the plant will continue as an important contributor to the local economy, as well as provide a market for dairy patrons' milk. We are committed to making this a smooth transition to new ownership."

Land O'Lakes has been a long-term supplier of raw milk to the Melrose facility. DFA has significant milk supply in the region.

Land O'Lakes and DFA, which will each hold 50 percent ownership in Melrose Dairy Proteins LLC, said current plant operations and service to existing customers and producers will continue, adding that plans are to further upgrade plant technology and tailor ongoing production to market needs.

USDA Organic Regulations Topic Of Feb. 21 Meeting

BIRD-IN-HAND (Lancaster Co.) — Effective Feb. 21, the USDA organic rule will be the law of the land. It is vitally important that organic farmers and those considering organic certification understand how to work under the new regulations as soon as possible.

After the new law goes into effect, there is an 18-month phase-in period. That's not a lot of time, especially for livestock farmers and food processors.

Pennsylvania Certified Organic (PCO) will hold a training on the new regulations at its Southeast Regional Meeting on Feb. 21, in Bird-in-Hand. The presentation will be conducted by Leslie Zuck, executive director of PCO, along with PCO staff, industry experts and organic inspectors. Topics will cover procedures for organic certification of crops and livestock, processing and handling operation and materials allowed for organic production.

Specific requirements will be discussed and participants will be encouraged to ask questions pertinent to their operations. For example, once a dairy herd is converted to organic, all replacement animals must be certified organic. This is a change from current standards and may raise questions about the source of dairy heifers.

Another change requires that all young dairy stock be managed organically from before birth (last trimester of gestation). Outdoor access will be discussed, as it i required for all animals, including poultry.

The new regulations impose more restrictions on compost production. Organic producers must now work with a new material list known as "The National List of Allowed and Prohibited Substances." A copy of the new regulations and the National List will be handed out at the meeting.

Other Talks Focus On Crop Rotations, Tillage Practices, GMO Contamination

PCO is delighted to host Mary-Howell and Klaas Martens again this year as guest speaks at the meeting In addition to showing their slide presentation and talking about real-life organic farming successes, Mary-Howell will delve into the trials and tribulations of protecting our organic farms from GMO contamination.

Klaas and Mary-Howell farm about 1,100 acres of soybeans, corn, small grains, red kidney beans, and processing sweet corn in the Finger Lakes area of New York. They also have a rapidly-growing organic animal feed business. Developing viable markets for organic crops is an ongoing project.

By paying careful attention to soil fertility management and various cultural weed control approaches, they are able to achieve very good weed control, high yields, and consistent good quality crops. Well-planned crop rotation breaks many weed and pest cycles, and helps maintain high soil fertility with a minimal need for purchased amendments.

The use of blind tillage implements, such as a coil tine harrow and a rotary hoe, effectively control many weeds before crop emergence, and a tractor equipped with both front and back mounted cultivators is used to clean any remaining weeds from row middles. They have "how to" slides showing these innovative tillage practices and customized equipment.

OSU Ag Economist: Beans Take Hit in USDA Report

COLUMBUS, Ohio - A U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) report recently released increased the soybean carryout by 25 million bushels, fooling the grain trade that expected increased export volume related to Europe's concerns over "mad" cow disease.

"It looks like the report hammered the soybean market again," said agricultural economist Allan Lines, Ohio State University. " From the point of view of the report, it did just the opposite of what the market thought soybeans would do."

USDA expects a 345-million-bushel carryout, an increase from 320 million bushels projected in its January report. Both numbers were a lot higher than the pre-report trade guesses for a 295-million-bushel carryout, Lines said.

The report upended the trade expectations for increased soymeal exports to Europe in response to those countries' recent bans on using meat and bone meal in animal feeds as a precaution against mad cow disease.

However, Europe's beef demand has plummeted anyway, thus reducing the need for soymeal as an alternative feed for livestock.

"Across western Europe, meat consumption has dropped by 30 percent and with that, there is less demand for our bean meal," Lines said. "When you start slaughtering all those potentially diseased cattle, as they have been doing recently, there aren't a heck of a lot of cows left to feed."

Other developments on the international scene also gave a pessimistic outlook for U.S. bean exports, Lines said. Soyoil exports took a hit as Southeast Asian palm oil producers geared up production. In South America, a record soybean crop is expected. "Those combined factors just don't spell anything good for our exports," Lines said.

For corn, the carryout news wasn't good, but at least it wasn't as devastating as it was for soybeans, Lines said. USDA projected a 1.891-billion-bushel carryout, which was above the trade estimate of 1.85 billion bushels. However both numbers "went in the same direction" since USDA's January projection for a 1.806-billion-bushel carryout, Lines said.

"Corn hurt a little bit, but not like the beans," Lines said. "The trade was expecting that kind of thing."

Lines attributed the increased corn carryout to competition from Argentina and China, both of which can draw on either high production or existing stocks to fill the world's orders. Another issue might be that some Asian buyers might be wary of U.S. corn supplies that were found to be contaminated with the genetically modified StarLink corn not approved for human consumption, Lines said.

On the domestic front, though, ethanol production is increasing as "new plants are coming on stream," to meet the demand for an alternative to the MBTE gasoline additive that was found to be harmful to water supplies, Lines said.

Lines said the report doesn't contain anything drastic enough to force U.S. farmers to change their planting plans for spring. USDA will be releasing its 2001 prospective plantings report on March 30.

As for marketing strategies, Lines advises, "Be in a protective environment on beans." Think about forward contracting soybeans for late winter or March and then take advantage of a generous loan deficiency payment at harvest, he said.

Grass-Based Systems

miles), Kelsey said that ag security areas make up only 5,045 square miles. Only 213 square miles, as of May 18, 1999, was preserved in the state through ag easements.

"There's a huge amount of land still not in ag security or easement programs," he said. The reality: it is impossible to purchase development rights for all farmers in Pennsylvania.

The key questions remain: if farming support structures also disappear, including machinery, parts, feed, milk hauler, and other processing industries, "the farmer's not going to survive very well."

Survey participants noted that they depend on support systems in the county. Seventy-four percent purchase their feed in the county, 85 percent purchase their petroleum products, and 61 percent purchase their farm machinery in the county.

From December '89 to December '92, the 10 leading ag-producing counties in the southeast made up the greater percentage of ag easement sales. That changed from after '92 until '98, when the easement purchased became more widely scattered throughout the state.

There's been strong public support for the bound referendum in 1987, which established financing for the statewide easement program. About 70 percent of voters, farm and nonfarm, said "yes" to the program.

During a workshop conducted by Kelsey Wednesday afternoon, participants voiced their concerns. Many agreed that grazing can be useful in showing how economically viable and environmentally friendly grass-based management systems can be to improve public perception about the importance of farming and preserve farming as a way of life.

Investment And Knowledge

New Zealand grass-based producers are successful because by making an investment in good fencing, "they put in less money toward labor," said Ben Bartlett, DVM, Michigan State University.

Bartlett spoke about tours of seven different countries, including Ontario, Canada; Argentina; Holland; England; Ireland; New Zealand; and western Australia.

Producers who were most successful make the investment in high quality systems and completely understand their feed quality and amount of feed stocks throughout the year.

Producers should know yields as a percentage of dry matter per acre. One farmer, noted Bartlett, "knew this off the top of his head."

Ninety percent of the pasture quality will be "due to your management," he said, "It's a mirror of your management."

Greg Coumo, forage agronomist with the University of Minnesota, spoke about ways to get more energy and durability out of forages. One way is through Kura clover, which is long-lasting in the field.

The key is to obtain the right mix of grass and legumes for "production and persistence," he said.

One study by the university indicated that alfalfa, over the long run, provided more forage than a control planting, and stood up to a grazier mix and a red clover/birdsfoot trefoil test planting.

Keys to success are to manage competition, obtain good seed-to-soil contact, moisture, and correct rotational grazing. Fertilization is critical on low pH soils.

Forage yield was best and harvest was higher when grazing was done only to 6-8 inches residue, and dropped off considerably when grazing too close, to 2-4 inches of residue.

Tim Kelsey, assistant professor of ag economics at Penn State, standing at left, reviews questions and concerns about ag preservation during a workshop at the grazing and forage conference.

Grants Help Farmers Explore New Ground

COLUMBUS, Ohio - Farmers looking for new ways of doing business because of low commodity prices could be eligible for a grant, said Mike Hogan, agriculture and natural resources agent at the Carroll County office of Ohio State University Extension and Ohio sustainable agriculture co-coordinator.

The North Central Region Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education (SARE) program has allocated about $350,000 for the 2001 Producer Grant Program.

The program lets farmers explore new enterprises and practices such as direct marketing of fresh vegetables, organic farming, agritourism, rotational grazing, precision farming, biological weed and pest control, soil conservation, or anything else that would help a farm become more economically viable, environmentally friendly or socially acceptable, Hogan said.

Over the past nine years, the producer grant program has awarded more than 300 grants to producers in the North Central states who test, evaluate and adapt sustainable agriculture practices for their operations; share information with other producers through educational events, field days or demonstrations; develop new technologies; or create or modify equipment. In 2000, Ohio was awarded more producer grants than any of the 12 states in the North Central Region, which includes Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, Ohio, South Dakota and Wisconsin.

Individual farmers can compete for grants of up to $5,000, and groups of three or more farmers from separate operations can receive grants of up to $15,000. The individual grants are for one year, and the group grants are for two years. Applicants must identify specific problems and potential solutions to those problems.

"These funds can help reduce the risk of trying something new," Hogan said. "And, as grants go, these are really simple to put together, but you have to be willing to write a report of your findings and send it to the North Central Region SARE office, which then shares your information with other producers across the 12-state region."

The grants are not always for new enterprises. For example, farmers already involved with farm markets could receive funding for more in-depth consumer studies that help show where their markets should be several years down the road, he said.

In addition, a cooperative effort between North Central Region SARE and the National Agroforestry Center is providing approximately $11,500 to target producer projects that integrate trees and shrubs into agricultural systems.

"The goal is to encourage farmers to develop innovative marketing practices that increase farm income and contribute to sustainable rural communities," Hogan said. "Marketing strategies for all agricultural products, including produce, livestock, poultry, dairy, agroforestry products and aquaculture are included."

Any agricultural producers living in the North Central Region may apply for the North Central Region SARE Producer Grants.

Previous grant recipients are eligible to apply and should submit a progress report if their application is related to their previous grant, Hogan said.

The deadline for applications to be turned into the North Central Region SARE office is March 30. Grant recipients will be named on June 21, and funding should begin in autumn 2001.

SARE is funded through the USDA Cooperative State Research, Education and Extension Service (CSREES). The purpose of the SARE Program is to generate and share information that is sound and practical about alternative farming systems believed to have the potential to increase the sustainability of agriculture.

ASA Welcomes Oilseed Payment Program Benefits to Farmers

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The American Soybean Association (ASA) welcomes today's announcement by the U.S.

Department of Agriculture (USDA) calling for distribution of about $500 million to U.S. oilseed producers. ASA estimates that 77 percent of the funds, or about $385 million, will be paid to farmers based upon their soybean production.

"ASA appreciates USDA's announcement of the Oilseed Payment," said ASA President Tony Anderson, a soybean, corn and wheat producer from Mount Sterling, Ohio. "Farmers and the communities in which they live will benefit from the positive economic impact these payment will provide. The money will assist farmers who are struggling with historically low farm prices."

In 1999, ASA was the lead organization that pressed Congress for a special income assistance program as part of a comprehensive emergency farm assistance package. Congress authorized the special oilseed payment after ASA raised concerns that the Agricultural Marketing Transition Act (AMTA) payments did not reflect soybean prices and income, since AMTA payments are based on former program crop acres and yields. In 2000, ASA again successfully urged Congress to include an oilseed payment program in emergency farm legislation passed by Congress. About 28 percent of U.S. crop area was planted to soybeans last year.

Producers who planted soybeans or other eligible crops in 2000 are eligible to participate in the Oilseed Payment Program. A producer's payment yield for soybeans is based on a county historical average or the producer's actual yield. A producer's payment acres are based on the highest of planted acres in 1997, 1998, or 1999, except for new producers the payment acres are based on 2000 plantings. For example, a farm with 200 acres of soybeans, with a 42 bushel per acre yield, can expect to get about $1,196.00 from this program at the projected payment rate for soybeans of $0.1425 per bushel.

ADADC Mid East Board Of Trustees Votes In 2001 Officers

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Mid East Board of Trustees elected its 2001 officers.

Paul Broering, of St. Henry, Ohio, Auglaize County was re-elected to a third term as president. "I strongly believe in the dairy promotion checkoff program. The checkoff program is working to increase dairy product demand," Broering says. "Per capita consumption of all dairy products has increased by 11.5 percent since 1984 — that's an increase of 72 pounds more dairy per person!"

Newly-elected officers include Rita Kennedy, Valencia, Butler County, vice president; Betty Herron, Salem, Ohio, Columbiana County, secretary; and Ray Diebold, Altoona, Blair County, treasurer. All officers were elected to serve one-year terms.

ADADC Mid East is the local planning and management organization responsible for increasing demand for U.S.-produced dairy products on behalf of America's dairy farmers. ADADC Mid East works closely with Dairy Management, Inc.™, the national dairy promotion organization, to implement dairy promotion, education and research programs nationwide. The dairy farmer checkoff program funds both organizations.

Land O'Lakes Consumer Sales Director Named President Of IDDBA

ARDEN HILLS, Minn. — Land O'Lakes Central Zone Consumer Sales Director Don Nebhan was recently selected 37th President of the International Dairy-Deli-Bakery Association (IDDBA).

Nebhan has served on the IDDBA Board of Directors since 1992, where he has enjoyed building relationships and being involved with the association. His selection as president, Nebhan says, reflects Land O'Lakes reputation and status in the foods industry.

"This honor recognizes Land O'Lakes' position as a leader in the deli industry," Nebhan said. "And, it has helped us gain new business through recognition, credibility, and exposure."

The IDDBA 2001 Annual Seminar and Expo, "Northern Lights," will be held in Minneapolis this year, where cutting edge equipment and ideas will be displayed.

"The expo offers a venue for manufacturers and retailers to get together to share information and move the industry forward," Nebhan said.

The IDDBA, founded in 1964, helps its 85,000 members (manufacturers, retailers, wholesalers, distributors, brokers, and many others) enhance their economic position by providing opportunities for professional dialogue, education, exchange of industry data and selling opportunities.

It has evolved over the years to reflect the changing scope of member needs in the dairy, deli, bakery and related industries. IDDBA members meet the challenges of today's business world by exchanging information and ideas, participating in educational programs, and networking.

Nebhan joined Land O'Lakes in 1987 after building his career with Campbell Soup, Decker Food Company and Hickory Farms, among others.

THE CASE FOR IRRADIATING MEAT AND POULTRY

William R. Henning
Extension Meat Scientist
Penn State

The meat industry continues to be under pressure to produce products that are essentially free from bacteria that can cause illness.

Even though a great deal of progress has been made in reducing pathogens and spoilage bacteria on meat and poultry, it is still not free from pathogens. In fact, increased testing frequency and improved recovery and testing methods have led to more pathogens being found and more recalls of meat products.

There is only one method capable of removing essentially all pathogens. Although meat processors have adopted many new intervention methods, ionizing radiation (irradiation) of meats is the only one that can provide safe food to the consumer, practically eliminating pathogens.

Although research on meat irradiation has been conducted in the U.S. since 1953, the final rule approving irradiation for all raw meats became effective Feb. 23, 2000. To date, only one new irradiation facility has been built to accommodate treatment of meat products.

This facility, in Souix City, Iowa, has a commitment from several large meat processors to irradiate ground beef patties. Many in the food industry thought that by now, consumers would be faced with purchasing decisions about irradiated meats, but this has not happened at the rate expected. Only one retailer in western Pennsylvania and one door-to-door distributor (Schwann) is actively marketing irradiated ground beef patties.

Ionizing radiation can improve the safety, quality, and variety of foods available to consumers. Although other processing measures can reduce bacteria levels in raw foods, irradiation is more effective because it can eliminate pathogens such as E. coli 0157:H7, which is good news for many consumers who don't care for their burgers overcooked. It also would give a margin of safety for high-risk groups such as hospitals, nursing homes, schools, and families with small children.

Unlike cooking, which also eliminates pathogens, irradiation does not change the fresh character of the product. It also has the benefits of delaying ripening of fruits and preventing sprouting in vegetables.

Foods and other consumer products are treated by exposing the product to a source of gamma rays. Gamma rays are similar to other energy rays such as X-rays, microwaves, and even radio waves. The difference is in the length of the wave that affects its ability to directly change cell functions or components.

The energy of the wave breaks chemical bonds in the DNA stands of organisms such as bacteria and insects so they cannot multiply and eventually die. Irradiation works mostly by indirect methods by forming free radicals from water (O and OH). The OH radicals are responsible for about 90 percent of the disruption the DNA in the living cells present. Many production factors also affect the effectiveness of the irradiation treatment: growth phase of the bacteria, temperature, water and fat content of the food, and the presence of ingredients such as salt.

The process is rather simple. The object being treated is passed through a protected area where it is bombarded with gamma rays. The rays pass through the product and the product is rendered safe. The two methods of producing gamma rays are either a radioactive "source" such as cobalt or cesium or it is an electrically generated "beam" in a linear accelerator.

Electron beams are similar in many ways to X-rays but produce more energy and have a more destructive effect on bacteria. In some cases, electron beam and X-rays are used in combination to increase the effect of the electron beam.

The cobalt "source" is much less expensive to construct initially, but this is offset by the cost of disposing of the radioactive waste. Electron beam plants are more expensive to construct and they do not penetrate the products as well as the source type.

Normally, the electron beam will penetrate only about two-inches, which means a box of frozen beef patties must be treated from both sides.

The first research on irradiation of meats began in the late 1800s. The first patent was issued for irradiation of meats in 1921.

In 1953, the U.S. army became interested in a method of preserving meat for troops in the field. They opened a research facility for testing irradiation at Natick, Mass. Later, food was irradiated for the astronauts in the space program.

At this point, there are two processing plants designed to treat foods with ionizing radiation. One in Plant City, Fla., processes some fruits and vegetables using a cobalt source. Other plants are operating in Canada and Europe.

Today a few foods such as wheat, potatoes, strawberries, and many consumer products are being treated by ionizing radiation. Nearly all spices have been treated with irradiation to kill insects and other parasites. It was found that this treatment is both effective and safer than the old method of using ethylene oxide.

Many fruits and vegetables are irradiated for such reasons as delayed ripening, reduced sprouting, and removal of insects. The use of irradiation is widely used in medical/pharmaceutical products. Some examples are medical supplies such as alcohol wipes, cotton balls, adhesive bandages; contact lenses/cleaning solutions, eye droppers, and ointments; dental supplies; drug mixing/dispensing systems; surgical instruments, surgical gloves, and gowns; syringes and needles; thermometers/covers; topical ointments; and animal vaccines.

In addition, many consumer products are typically sterilized by irradiation such as baby bottles and nipples, pacifiers, and teething rings; cosmetics; food packaging; pet food and rawhide dog toys; and feminine hygiene products.

What about the safety of irradiating foods? Food officials around the world have given the stamp of approval to irradiation, even consumers in Europe consume many foods which have been treated with irradiation.

One issue that has been raised by some opponents is the question of the food safety. First, the product is not radioactive. Even though they were treated with gamma rays, they were never radioactive. The effects on meat quality, another frequent concern, are minimal. Because the dosage levels of treatment are very low, there is no discernible changes in flavor or aroma at the lower levels approved today.

The processes approved for irradiation of meat products does not sterilize the product. It must still be properly handled before and after treatment. Some have used the term "electronic pasteurization" to describe the process more accurately it is pasteurization, not sterilization, and it is being done through electron beams, not exposed to radioactive materials.

So, if this process really works and if it is really that safe, why hasn't it been more widely adopted? Many food retailers across the country have made irradiated ground beef available to consumers but have not advertised it. Why? Fear of being picketed by consumer groups.

Many consumer advocate groups such as Center for Science in the Public Interest (CSPI) have voiced strong opposition to the process. Their claim is that meat processors will relax other food safety practices if they have a final process step, which kills pathogens. Of course, this is untrue as meat processors view this process as another means to eliminate pathogens from their products.

Other, more radical "consumer" groups have threatened store pickets and boycotts. It seems that food retailers and fast food restaurants have been intimated by threats of picketing by a few radical groups.

One fast food spokesperson once said, prophetically, that everyone wants to be the first to be second to use irradiated meats. What he is saying is that no one wants to be subjected to negative publicity and public scrutiny of being first to adopt this technology. After the initial onslaught of criticism and pickets, the next users of the product will have it easy.

If consumers are not given the facts about the benefits of the treatment of meat with low doses of ionizing irradiation, they are likely to have enough concerns to avoid purchasing it.

Biosecurity, Identification, Disclosure Issues At Center Of National Holstein Attention

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

WEST MIDDLESEX (Mercer Co.) — Holstein breeders face a plethora of issues: the importance of Holstein ancestry identification, open disclosure, and biosecurity.

Biosecurity reigns almost at the top as one of the hottest issues today, according to James N. "Bud" Leckie, National Holstein Association president.

Leckie spoke last week during the 88th annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association (PHA) at the Radisson Hotel in West Middlesex.

"It may come to pass that even if the (dam's) daughter is rated Excellent, it won't bring big money as long as there isn't some assurance there's no disease in her," Leckie said.

Leckie, who grew up in Mount Vernon, Ga. and lives near the Smokey Mountains of Tennessee, said the business is fun to be into "because there's people involved." The people we meet, Leckie noted, "is what makes the difference."

Keeping up with the breed association, the issues faced by breeders, the plunging stock market, and all the technical aspects of registration and genetic documentation is headache enough, according to the Holstein president. "I know livestock," he said. "You can get a headache just trying to keep the cattle alive."

The national association remains on pretty sound footing, Leckie noted, and plans are under way to expand the field representative staff to about 16. Though the association, like everyone else, is at the "mercy of the markets," he said, "I think to me that registering cows is the only way to go.

"If you don't know where you have been, how are you going to know where you're going to be?"

Leckie spoke about efforts to use crossbreeding to improve milking through "hybrid vigor." He views this as kind of a fad. "We can have a bigger gene pool in the Holstein breed if we do it right," said Leckie.

Biosecurity is still a big problem, with Johne's Disease becoming a real worry. Looking at the issue would be like watching the problems with BSE, or "mad cow" disease, overseas. Can you image, Leckie said, what would happen to steakhouses if we had a BSE problem in the U.S.?

America has always been notorious, Leckie said, for "sitting on its hands and waiting for something, some disaster to happen." A big issue is cattle disclosure — a system to let stockyards know where the cattle are coming from. A system to track them could be in place within the next two years, and could be part of the 2002 Farm Bill, if the associations want it.

"We want protection for us, for all of us," he said. Calling for solutions to these issues involves grass-roots involvement. "If you don't get involved," Leckie said, "you don't get much out of it."

The convention included several awards presented at a breakfast awards program.

Following are photos of various award winners.

Additional Soy Reviewed For Humanitarian Assistance

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) has reviewed five value-added soy products, which will facilitate distribution of more soy products in U.S. humanitarian assistance programs.

The American Soybean Association (ASA) and Qualified State Soybean Boards (QSSB) provided nutritional, pricing and other information to USDA for the review of defatted soy flour, soy protein concentrates, isolated soy protein, textured vegetable proteins and soy milk replacer.

The USDA Farm Service Agency assessment is valuable to USDA's Foreign Agriculture Service (FAS) and the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) as they consider the soy products for P.L. 480 and other humanitarian assistance efforts. U.S. soy oil and a corn-soy blend are already commonly used products in humanitarian assistance efforts by Private Voluntary Organizations, (PVOs), such as CARE and Catholic Relief Services, as well as the United Nation's World Food Programme. U.S. aid programs utilized 14.8 million bushels of U.S. soy products overseas during 2000.

"USDA's review of these products opens the door for new offerings of soy's nutritional benefits to people who need it around the world," said Dwain Ford, Chairman of ASA's Trade Policy and International Affairs Committee. "This assessment is just one of the many activities we are initiating through the World Initiative for Soy in Human Health (WISHH) Program."

ASA and QSSBs launched WISHH to further the use of U.S. soy products in developing countries where rapidly-growing populations of all income leveis can benefit from soy in their diets. WISHH activities range from identifying new uses for soy-fortified noodles in Indonesia, to providing a corn-soy blend to hurricane victims in Nicaragua, and to research on how soy-based foods may provide essential nutrition to the millions of people affected by HIV/AIDS.

The WISHH Program also aids U.S. PVOs that can request the soy products from USDA and USAID for their international assistance efforts. WISHH supports PVOs in developing proposals to USDA and USAID for use of soy products that will benefit the people receiving assistance from the PVOs.

The newly reviewed products offer positive options for PVOs and others. Soy flour provides a nutritional boost to breads, tortillas or in ground meat, while soy protein concentrates can serve as a protein supplement. Uses for soy protein isolates range from nutritional beverages to soups, sauces and spreads. Textured vegetable proteins can be used to make vegetarian foods as well as salad toppings. Soy milk replacers can play a valuable role in feeding the many lactose-intolerant people in developing countries.

Checklists, Consumer Trends, Disease Control At Poultry Day

cludes components such as environment, sanitation, isolation, personnel, farm traffic, and flock health history and management.

An evaluation takes into consideration, for instance, how many backyards flocks are in the grid area, which impacts the score of the assessment. Biosecurity measures such as locked doors on the poultry houses also figure into the score.

The overall cleanliness — for instance, if the facilities are washed and disinfected between flocks — makes up the sanitation score. Whether or not employees wear dedicated boots, use footbaths and disinfectant spray, or work on other poultry farms also changes the score.

Scores are broken into ranks of 50 points to determine the risk figure for each farm.

Looking into the future, Owen predicted that food safety and animal welfare issues will become increasingly important. "We in animal agriculture have a moral obligation to provide the best care for them each day. If we do that, animal welfare will become much more of a non-issue."

Recognizing Excellence

A panel of industry representatives educated the audience about "protecting the environment" and "being a good neighbor." Tyson representative Tom Pantano highlighted the business's efforts to recognize producers who excel in both environmental and community categories.

"People are moving in and surrounding our farms," said Pantano. For starters, "We need to educate people on nutrient management practices and keep bad publicity out of the newspaper."

Tyson foods, which includes 35 production complexes in 15 states and 7,500 growers nationwide, gives an environmental award for producers. The farms are judged locally, then go on to national competition for manure management, off-farm, ag-related activities, the appearance of the farm, community involvement, innovations, wildlife management, and relations with neighbors.

Responsibility Checklist

Bill Achor, environmental coordinator for Wenger Feeds, presented a checklist for responsible poultry production. First on the list was appearance, as producers should evaluate the amount of mowing done on the grounds along with the look of the buildings and equipment.

"It's for the nonfarm neighbors driving by, trying to see what kind of a producer we are," said Achor.

Mortality management is also a factor in being a responsible producer. Birds should be legally taken care of in a clean, screened, or fenced area.

Careful manure management can also make or break a poultry farm. Stockpiling manure that is close to water or neighbors should be carefully monitored. Also the brokers who will take the manure away should be held to your standard, said Achor, so manure is not left on the roads for your neighbors to drive though.

Educational tours are increasingly recognized as a valuable tool to reach nonfarm neighbors, legislators, and environmental groups.

"Agriculture's changed a lot in the last 10 years, so get people out to show what we're doing and what our challenges are so they can have a commonsense approach to decision-making," he said.

A producer can ease expansion pains by discussing plans with the township supervisor, DEP field supervisors, and the county conservation district to tap their knowledge and develop a game plan, suggested Achor.

"Go beyond compliance," he said. "Don't just be a box checker."

Neighbor Relations

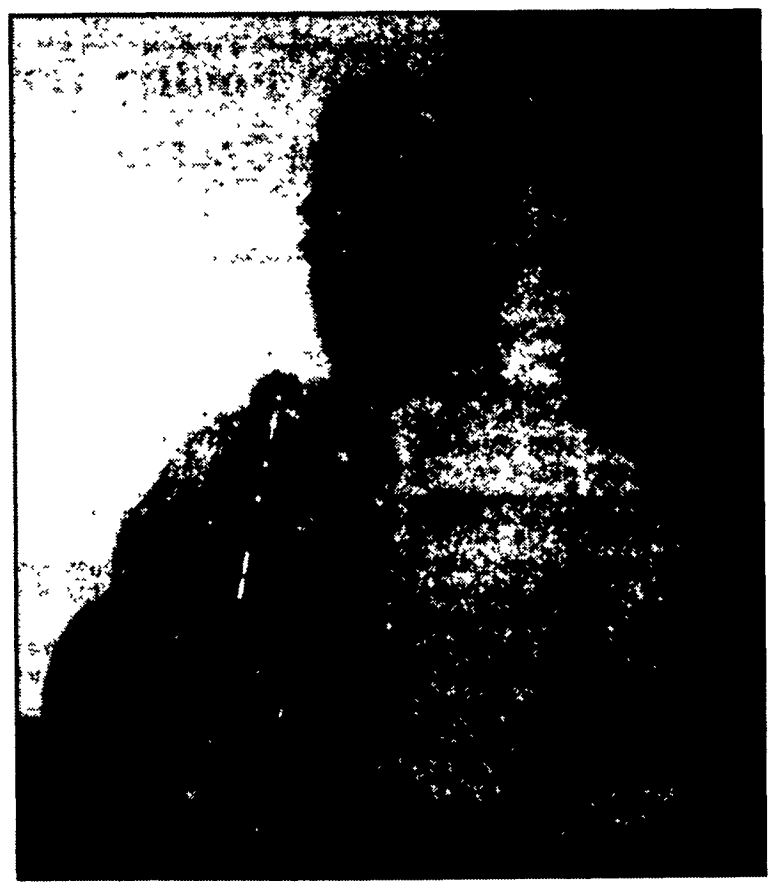
Leon Ressler outlined results of a six-week odor control project with Penn State. Researchers studied three odor-reducing strategies and surveyed neighbors which produced results applicable to the poultry industry.

For instance if neighbors knew the producer, scores tended to be lower, said Ressler. However if the neighbors could see the barn, scores tended to be higher. Attractive farms had smaller odor scores.

"We should take to heart these points and do all you can to improve your circumstances with your neighbors. We're a small portion of the total population," he said.

Practical Farm Experience

Tony Brubaker, who farms with his father and brother, shared basic tenets which help to make their operation successful.



Tony Brubaker, representing Brubaker farms in Mount Joy, believes that being responsible, considerate, and keeping communications lines open are integral to a successful operation.

Winners of the national Tyson environmental award two years ago, the Brubakers and eight full-time employees operate two broiler houses contracted under Tyson, milk 500 cows and have 410 replacement heifers.

Sound environmental practices and solid neighbor relations are especially important, as "we farm up to the back yards of 160 homes," said Brubaker, who also noted the hundreds of other homes in close proximity.

Brubaker Farms operates under three objectives, he said, "be responsible, be considerate, and communicate."

Under the heading of responsibility, Brubaker recommended having a nutrient management plan.

"It helps explain what you are doing" and helps to protect against neighbor accusations. Additionally streambank fencing not only protects water quality but affords greater aquatic life.

Responsibility also means fixing problems quickly. "If something malfunctioned and there's manure all over the road, we immediately clean the road."

Stay educated on the latest management technologies, recommended Brubaker, and take advantage of composting, injecting, and no-till techniques.

A responsible operator keeps the farm neat and clean, the yards mowed, weeds sprayed, and equipment washed, which also lends to good neighbor relations and trust.

"We try to put ourselves in our neighbors shoes as much as possible," said Brubaker. Not spreading on holidays, driving at reasonable speeds past the houses for safety and dust reasons, and being careful of lights consistently shining into homes during night spreading keeps good communications lines open.

"We take every opportunity we have to educate our neighbors and non-farm public on what we're doing," he said. "We want to hear what they have to say and act promptly.

After a complaint about flies, for example, they tilled the field at a less-than-optimal time because it "lets them know that they are heard and what they said was important to us.

"Most people will be reasonable when given the chance. Those who are not probably are angry at more than just you," he said.

Communicating directly and handling complaints not only gives an opportunity for the producer to answer questions but also keeps communications lines open.

"We set the stage for agriculture in the future," said Brubaker. "I'd love to be able to hand over to my children a great way of life, not a hat full of headaches."

PEACCE

Amy Van Blarcom, PennAg representative and public liaison, explained the Pennsylvania Environmental Agriculture conservation Certification of Excellence (PEACCE). The program attempts to promote environmentally safe agriculture practices, encourage produces to minimize environmental risks, and recognizes producers who meet or exceed PEACCE standards.

Three components of the program includes an environmental literacy and awareness course, or the Penn State Livestock Certification Course. Twenty-five of these courses have already been completed in Pennsylvania. The second components includes a voluntary, free, confidential on-farm assessment by America's Clean Water Foundation.

The assessment report provides recommendations to help improve water quality, odor, or pests. The final components of PEACCE is performed by the county conservation district, which assesses the operation and then reports to the district board which will then approve or deny certification.

The national curriculum will be administered twice a year and producers who wish to maintain certification will complete the credit program every three years. Benefits include good relations with the community, minimized risk of litigation, possible insurance benefits, and statewide recognition.

The program is being pilot tested in Chester, Lancaster, and Berks counties.

Bronchitis Situation

Dr. Eric Ginerich, University of Pennsylvania, informed the audience about the poultry industry's ever-changing bronchitis situation. Infectious bronchitis can mutate readily, producing variant viruses, said Ginerich, which means continual monitoring is necessary for effective vaccination programs.

To broilers, bronchitis is an upper respiratory disease which causes difficulty in breathing. In layers bronchitis, besides being an upper respiratory disease, causes a 2-50 percent drop in egg production. The shell and internal egg quality decreases. The eggs may also be shaped irregularly because the virus attacks the oviduct tissue.

Bronchitis has no specific treatment because it is a viral disease. Supportive therapy such as antibiotics, vitamins and electrolytes in water, and decreasing dust in the facilities are treatments commonly used to alleviate the symptoms.

Prevention includes careful watch over the people entering the facility or the equipment used in the house. Egg material on equipment, said Ginerich, provides a place for the virus to reside and consequently spread.

Broilers are vaccinated typically at one day then at 18 days with a sprayer. The layer vaccination program includes vaccination and boosters 15, 28, 42, and 84 days, plus a booster every weeks in lay.

Researchers will continue to isolate problem flocks and viruses and characterized the viruses for vaccination strategies, according to Ginerich.

What We Can Learn From Two Mice

Jim Shirk, PennAg representative, and Dr. John Schwartz, York County extension director, combined to present highlights from management advisor Spencer Johnson's book, "Who Moved My Cheese?" The story follows the progress of a mouse in a maze that is learning how to navigate to search for cheese.

Change happens, said Schwartz, and each producer needs to ask, "do I need to be venturing out?" he said. Anticipate change, said Schwartz. Monitor it, adapt to it quickly, move with it, enjoy it, and savor the adventure, he said.

Consumers are "moving the cheese," said Shirk. "They are dictating not just what they want us to producer, but also how to produce it . The challenge is not only to recognize what they are saying but decide what to do about it."

Consumers are reshuffling,

Shaping the future with 4-H and FFA.

First Union's Agri-Finance Department is proud to support 4-H and FFA members and programs. We believe preserving the family farm is one of the most effective ways to ensure a better future for everyone. So First Union is committed to working with young people and supporting their goals.

With guidance and encouragement, they will develop the skills and values they'll need to be successful in farming or wherever their lives take them. And their achievements will benefit us all.

fun trivia activity for the youth, the program also offered a serious side as Penn State representatives gave presentations on many issues that face dairy farmers daily.

The morning program time was split between Drs. Bhushan Jayarao and Robert Van Saun, fellow extension veterinarians with Penn State University.

Jayarao focused his presentation on the prevention and control of mastitis in early and late lactation. He stressed the importance of an adequate dry period as well as the cow's environment.

"If you don't give a long enough dry period, you don't get good re-growth of the alveoli (the cells that produce milk). In the next lactation, the peak milk production will be lower," he said. He also noted that many new infections of mastitis happen at the time of drying off or right before calving.

"When there's pressure on the udder, such as when she is entering her dry period or when she is ready to calve, many cows leak milk. That gives the bacteria a chance to enter the udder," he explained.

Jayarao also highlighted prevention methods involved in a dry cow mastitis program. Steps included are to test all cows five to seven days prior to drying off with the California Mastitis Test. Quarter milk samples should be submitted for culture on cows with a positive score, or cows can be treated with a mastitis lactation preparation. Regular dry cow therapy can be used on all cows with negative test results, he said.

"Treat her right, keep her in a clean, dry environment and she will do the right things for you," said Jayarao of all dairy cows.

Van Saun added that the

Dr. Bhushan Jayarao, left, and Dr. Robert Van Saun, Penn State extension veterinarians, gave presentations on managing mastitis and preventing metabolic diseases, respectively. Both focused on the cow's dry period as a time of increased management to prevent future problems.

simplifying, and destressing their lives to give more time for family, according to Shirk. The public is building bigger houses with smaller dining rooms but larger kitchens. Cooking shows and books are also enjoying rising popularity. "So basically people have less time for cooking but more interest in doing it," he said.

America is showing a desire to return to basics, with growing importance of eating as a family. Also increased concern in environmental issues and where the food comes from and how it was raised will also impact agriculture. Consumers are also looking at improving their health by what they eat, which will direct marketing of products. In addition they are concerned over ethics and buying food from a socially-responsible company.

"The bottom line is, what kind of a farm do you want to manage, and who do you want to produce for?" said Shirk.

cow's environment should also include adequate space for that cow to receive much needed nutrition. His talk focused mainly on controlling postpartum disorders through sound nutritional practices, especially in the dry period.

"It's the dry period that sets this whole system up," said Van Saun. "Colostrum quality and quantity is influenced by the diet of the dry cow. Viability of that calf is impacted by the dry cow diet. How much milk the cow makes for you and what the composition of that cow's milk is dependent on the dry cow diet. Fertility of that cow is impacted by what happens to that cow two months prior to her even calving. Periparturient diseases, like milk fever and ketosis, are also influenced by her diet as a dry cow. We really need to think of this late gestation period, not as a rest period, but as a critical preparation period."

Van Saun showed that the amount of nutrients required to support a cow in late pregnancy compared to the amount of nutrients required to support a milking cow increases very quickly.

"These cows went from being dry and pregnant to making 65 pounds of milk at four percent fat within seven days postpartum," he said.

This translates to a tripling of her glucose output, doubling her amino acid output, and a sevenfold increase in her fatty acid output. If she can't make this change, she ends up with some variation of metabolic disease.

Van Saun noted that periparturient diseases not only cause extra management concerns, but also cost the farmer in real and opportunity costs. An estimated costs of milk fever per incidence is $334. There are also uncalculated amounts of money lost in cows with subclinical signs of disease.

"We recognize the clinical down cow, we recognize the cow that we've got to have surgery done on, but the biggest problem we have with these diseases is what we call subclinical disease — the marginal cow, the cow that just doesn't take off very well, the cow that doesn't get to peak fill."

He outlined five critical control points that need to be dealt with, including maximizing dry matter intake, stimulation of rumen papillae, minimizing negative energy balance and protein balance, maintaining calcium homeostasis, and minimizing immune system dysfunction.

"Improving nutrition during transition can help the girls fight off problems," said Van Saun. He stated you need to balance the rations for what the cow is eating, monitor forage quality, and separate feeding groups. He also suggests that environmental stressors should be minimized and regular body condition scoring should be done.

"You never know where you can go if you don't know where you started," he said.

Afternoon sessions included programs on corn weed control by Bradford County Agronomy Agent Mark Madden, a Johne's Disease question and answer session conducted by Van Saun and Jayarao, and a program on the costs of raising heifers and contract raising of dairy heifers presented by Dr. Peter Tozer of Penn State University.

Tozer highlighted the cost of raising replacements and gave examples of various methods of contract heifer raising. One arrangement is when the producer relinquishes control of the animal to someone else, who agrees to raise it to maturity. The other arrangement is when the heifers are sold to a person who agrees to raise them giving the seller the first rights to purchase the animal back at maturity.

Regardless of which method is used, Tozer cautioned that all the details should be spelled out in the contract from performance standards to obligations of each party, including breeding decisions and health management.

More information on each dairy day presentation is available through local cooperative extension services.

USDA Announces Pork Checkoff Program To Continue

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Recently, the USDA announced a settlement with the National Pork Producers Council (NPPC) and the Michigan Pork Producer Association that will continue the Pork Checkoff Program. Under the settlement, certain program restructuring is required.

The changes, effective immediately, will ensure the separation of the National Pork Board and the NPPC and make the program more responsive to concerns of pork producers.

The restructuring requires the National Pork Board to:

- Employ its own management and staff, including the chief executive officer and chief financial officer.
- Manage separate contracts for promotion, research, and consumer information projects.
- Maintain separate office operations from the NPPC.
- Maintain separate communications from the NPPC.

Under the agreement, state pork producer associations will continue to operate independently and be accountable for checkoff funds but may cooperate on projects and communications with state affiliate organizations of the National Pork Producers Council.

The Pork Board will have approximately two years to demonstrate to producers and importers the value of the checkoff program to the industry. USDA will conduct a survey by June 2003 to determine whether 15 percent of producers and importers are in favor of conducting a referendum to decide continuation of the checkoff program. If the required number of producers and importers request a referendum, the referendum would then be held within one year.

Additional information about the settlement and related issues is available at: (http://www.ams.usda.gov/lsg/mpb/pork.htm).

tection to small and medium-sized dairy producers when milk prices are low."

'The bill has two unique features," Bailey said. "First, the size of the supplemental payment is tied to general market conditions. That means producers in the Northeast and Southeast, where most milk is used for bottling purposes, can benefit as well as producers in the Midwest and West, where more milk is used to make cheese.

"Second, the bulk of the payments are targeted to small and medium-sized dairy operations that have fewer than 150 cows. That's beneficial to many states that have large numbers of small family farms, like Pennsylvania," Bailey explained. "For example, a 'general' payment rate of 50 cents per hundred pounds (CWT) of milk is made when the annual average Class III price of milk is below $10.50 per hundredweight. The Class III price of milk averaged about $9.74 in 2000.

"An additional payment of 30 cents per hundred pounds of milk is made if a producer did not expand milk production from the previous year. That makes the maximum payment under the dairy fairness bill equal to 80 cents per hundredweight — a significant price increase. For a farm with 75 cows shipping 1.26 million pounds a year, they could receive $6,290 if they expanded and $10,065 if they did not."

The study shows the bill would provide a lower level of price protection when market prices are stronger, Bailey said. If the annual average Class III price of milk rises to between $12.01 and $12.50 per hundredweight, the general payment rate is 18 cents per hundredweight and the additional payment rate for not expanding is 14 cents per hundredweight.

"Our farm with 75 cows would then receive $2,265 if they expanded and $4,026 if they didn't," he explained.

Farmers receive the payments on the first 2.6 million pounds of milk produced, matching the criteria of the federal Dairy Market Loss Assistance program. While all dairy farmers are eligible to receive the payment, the bulk of the dollars spent under the bill would go to small and medium-sized dairy farms, typically under 150 cows.

Congress will consider the cost of the program as it decides whether to pass the legislation. The study estimates the cost will vary from $570 million in a low-price year to $206 million in a high-price year. Most of the payments will go to regions of the U.S. with a heavy concentration of small and medium-sized family farms and a lot of milk.

Bailey and Dunn observe that the bill would not completely solve the problem of "too much milk" in low price years. "On the one hand, there is an additional incentive payment for producers to not expand their milk production," Bailey said. "On the other hand, producers have the option of taking the minimum 'general' payment and expanding milk production. However, these payments are only made on the first 2.6 million pounds of milk produced. Thus, the bill tries to limit the potential for expansion of milk production."

Farming Forecast

A storm system passing by to the south and east has the potential to bring some snow late Sunday into Monday, but only if the track is right. Most indications are that it will be too far to the south to bring any appreciable snowfall here, but there should be at least flurries into Monday Cold air will remain in place across the region through Wednesday with at least some sunshine

Like 'Fence Posts Talking To Each Other'

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.— "People get so wrapped up in their own problems, they fail to communicate effectively with others. The result is everyone is talking to each other, but no one is really listening. It's like talking to a fence post," Dr. Ronald Hanson said.

Hanson, a motivational speaker from the University of Nebraska, counsels family members farming together. Recently, Hanson addressed the agri-educational seminar sponsored by First Union at the Farm and Home Center, Lancaster.

"Juggling demands of work, family, and personal needs is a challenge. And when farm prices take a nose dive, it causes additional stress in the marriage," Hanson said.

During extended periods of farm stress caused by overwork, constant worry, low market prices, and financial hardships, spouses often experience frustration. The sense of helplessness, of not being able to change market prices, and other situations can build into anger and depression.

Hanson works with family members to help them learn to communicate more effectively. He said the three most frequent complaints between family members include the following:

- He or she won't discuss his or her feelings with me.
- He or she tunes me out.
- He or she has time to talk with everyone but me.

Wives often complain that if a husband meets a fellow farmer at a sale, he will spend a hour and more talking with that farmer. But he has nothing to say when alone with her.

A husband may complain that his wife is always talking on the phone with her friends, but she never has time to talk with him.

"Call her on the phone," Hanson advises.

"I can't," her husband said. "The line is always busy."

Situations such as these are no laughing matter to the couples involved. Building healthy communication is no easy feat, especially if poor communication skills have become a way of life.

"Too often the inability to openly share personal feelings and the failure to discuss expectations can ruin family relationships," Hanson said.

Disagreements do not destroy relationships. It's how you handle disagreements that either destroy or build relationships, Hanson stresses.

Solving differences requires commitment. When Hanson counsels couples, he requires them to go alone on a date at least monthly. That means no other family members or friends can accompany the couple, and the couple is not allow to attend a party or other event where people might detract from the couple's attention to each other.

Spouses can get so wrapped up in their own problems that even if they do talk, no one is really listening. It's like talking to a fence post, according to Dr. Ron Hanson, University of Nebraska. Hanson counsels farm families on how to improve relationships.

Giving each other the silent treatment is a guaranteed way to build barriers in marriage.

Developing a good relationship between spouses requires a commitment of time and attention to each other.

Sometimes a spouse shrugs off a complaint by a spouse, dismissing its importance, but Hanson cautions, "Anytime someone perceives a problem, there is now a problem whether the problem is real or not. The problem will continue to exist until that perception is actually changed."

Spouses need to be sensitive to each other. Couples need to understand the situation and circumstances involved in order to work on a problem.

Barriers to communication between family members include the following:

- Reluctant to share personal feelings with others.
- Afraid to admit a mistake.
- Not willing to take the time to listen to others.
- Too much talking — not enough listening.
- Hard to effectively communicate when someone is always angry.
- Don't want to be bothered by others.
- Lack of trust with others. Lack of respect for others.
- Concerned with only their own needs and self-interests.
- Not interested in what someone else has to say.
- Lack of self-confidence and self-esteem.

Ten Skills For Good Listening Between Family Members

- Do not pass judgment until you have understood what the other person said.
- Do not add viewpoints or change what the other person has said.
- Do not permit your attention to drift while the other person is talking.
- Do not interrupt or change the subject.
- Do not close your mind.
- Do not finish a sentence for the other person.
- Do not permit wishful thinking.
- Do not rehearse your response.
- Do not put the other person off by saying, "We'll talk about it later."
- Do not rush the other person by saying, "This better be quick." Or, "I'm in a hurry."

Unfair Fighting Tactics To Avoid During A Disagreement

- Refuse to admit a problem exists.
- Walk away or give the silent treatment. Unwillingness to discuss the problem at hand.
- Attack the other person when there is no chance for rebuttal.
- Point out the other person's insecurities and faults.
- Say that friends and relatives agree with you.
- Keep fighting about the same old problems and issues no matter what the argument.

Family disagreements are normal and often inevitable, Hanson reminded the audience, but disagreements do not need to ruin family relationships.

"Learn to have disagreements without being disagreeable," Hanson said.

That advice is easier to say than to carry through. When trying to solve disagreements, learn to look for win-win situations.

Everyone needs to save face. Make a concession or two as a friendly gesture of good will. Resist having the last word or in taking a parting shot after things have been settled.

Know when to stop talking and just listen.

Too often in arguments couples use "killer terms." Examples of "killer terms" are "How dumb can you be?" Or, "Why do you always do that?"

Killer terms will stop the communication process entirely.

Learn to share the blame. Use "I" words rather than "you" words such as "you always" or "you never" when responding.

Hanson said that family arguments should be kept private and should never be argued in public. Generally, this isn't a problem for farm families who tend to be very private. Instead, Hanson said, personal pride pre-

On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

It took a long time. But we finally made it.

Honeymooners today often fly to Cancun for a week. Start their life together in Hawaii. Lounge and sun on the beaches of Florida. Maybe even go skiing somewhere in the Rockies.

Most newlyweds in our days of wedding planning couldn't afford such romantic getaways to begin life together. Especially when they were milking cows.

And so we spent a day at the campus of Penn State (visiting the dairy barns, surprise!) and made an attempt to get into the hunting camp in the mountains. That failed, due to two-foot snow drifts from a blizzard, which had hit the entire region just days before, barring our four-door sedan from even attempting the effort. Which, looking back, was probably a blessing because the camp would have been about 20-degrees and I don't recall having sufficient mountain gear along to cope with such rustic reality.

Niagara Falls, a popular honeymoon getaway of the time, was never even considered. Who'd go there in February, anyway?

A few folks, it turns out. Including some of us veterans of marriage.

Although it took us two years of trying. We made an attempt last year, but were thwarted by what turned out to be a rotted hose in the pickup's water system. Easily fixed, as it turned out, it nevertheless snatched enough time from our small window of opportunity available at that time that we bagged the dash to the border.

So, when our anniversary rolled around again, The Farmer determined that we would try this one more time. Providing that persistence pays off, we found ourselves recently perched and gingerly peering over the edge of a wall of cascading greenish water sending mist spiraling high, high into the cold winter air.

There was a minimal number of us hardy folks braving the damp, misty chill from the churning millions of gallons of water which pour over the Falls every minute. All of us bundled up to the hilt under layers of sweaters and heavy coats, hats, scarves, hoods, mittens, fashion tossed to the winds in deference to just keeping warm. And, while summer would certainly be warmer, we would have missed the dramatic ice displays built up from the Falls' perpetual mist.

Actually, for the time of year, it wasn't a bad day, allowing us to hike around deserted park areas, smiling back to the few fellow, equally bundled-up visitors we passed. After thoroughly exploring the American park side, we passed over into Canada, where officials who eyed our pickup waved us through, figuring we posed absolutely no threat to international security.

Pausing for awhile at Canada's larger Horseshoe Falls side, we then meandered along the downstream Gorge and its massive hydro-plants, went looking for the Welland Canal and instead stumbled into a prime fruit and vineyard growing area. Typical farmers, we spent the rest of the closing day looking at how others grow things, until it was so dark we could not longer see.

Opting to spend the night, we returned to briefly enjoy the Falls after dark, lit with changing pastel lights, then decided to go for broke on this rare occasion and book a room overlooking the display. Which, between the off-season rates and the favorable U.S.-to-Canada currency exchange rate, turned out to be a great bargain. From the 11th floor of a warm hotel, the lovely display of changing color on the majestic falls was predictably even more enjoyable than when viewed from an icy sidewalk on edge of the precipice, being showered by freezing mist.

So we have finally made our "honeymoon" visit to traditional Niagara Falls, albeit a couple of decades later and during the dead of winter. If you enjoy stunning natural beauty, but dislike crowds and waiting in lines, you might enjoy it as a winter vacation spot, too.

Be sure you bundle up well.

Think spring. Attend the York Garden and Flower Show, York Fairgrounds Expo Center, York, now through March 4.

York Garden And Flower Show Grows Bigger

YORK (York Co.) — Plans have been finalized for the expanded ninth annual York Garden and Flower Show. The show moves to Memorial Hall at the York Fairgrounds Expo Center, York, and will be two times the size it has been in prior years.

With double the amount of floor space, the move to the larger exposition hall allows the show to expand to become one of the five largest exclusively garden and flower shows in the East, according to Larry L. Shaffer, the show's executive producer. Dates and hours are Thursday, March 1, from noon to 9 p.m.; Friday, March 2, from noon to 9 p.m.; Saturday, March 3 from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; and Sunday, March 4, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

For years the focal point of the show has been a series of large display gardens, and with the expansion this year, "we've been able to add over a third more," said Shaffer, "bringing the total to 13 in all."

About 100 exhibitors will participate.

Special feature displays include floral designs by Federated Garden Clubs, Daffodil Challenge, Baltimore African Violet Club and a private collection of fascinating cacti, along with several other displays.

There will be thousands of flowers, plants, and accessories and beautiful gardens with ponds and waterfalls. Other interesting exhibits include garden statuary, gardening accessories, orchid plants, fresh-cut flowers, bonsai plants and everything needed to get started in herbal gardening. Experts will be on hand to discuss tree and lawn care, and professional landscape designers will be available to discuss specific gardening and landscape needs.

"Full-scale gardens highlight the York Garden and Flower Show" according to Shaffer, who noted that "landscape contractors and garden centers will take up to four days to install gardens." About 20,000 square feet of space is devoted to these large display gardens that have become a favorite with show visitors.

Professional floral design symposiums will be offered this year with tips on how to effectively use floral arrangements in the home plus other subjects helpful to consumers. As they are completed, the designs will be added to the growing exhibition of floral designs adjacent to the symposium room. The symposiums are offered in addition to the traditional seminars held throughout the show that cover a wide range of gardening and landscaping subjects.

Admission is $5 for adults, $4.50 for seniors age 65 and over, and $2 for children ages 10 to 15. Group rates are available. There is plenty of free parking. The York Fairgrounds Expo Center is on Carlisle Avenue, Rt. 74 south of Rt. 30 in York. Information is available by calling (717) 755-5885.

Learning to be a Father

Over the Christmas holidays, we watched videos of the boys' first days and years of life. Our oldest was so surprised that we gave him his first bath on the counter by the kitchen sink. He was so tiny and had such a loud cry. In the end, it was Daddy who came to his rescue.

Russell lovingly wrapped baby Garrison in a warm towel to dry him and then tried to comb his hair. Just as Russell was about to run the comb through Garrison's hair, he stopped abruptly and felt his own head to see which side he parted his own hair! Then without hesitation he proceeded to comb and part Garrison's hair on the left also. What a tender moment between father and son to catch on tape.

How is it that men learn to be fathers? I asked Russell that question the other evening. He told me he built on childhood memories of his own father and gut instincts.

He said, "How do people learn to cook or ride a bike? You keep trying and practicing."

Garret D. Evans from the University of Florida Cooperative Extension writes that learning to be a good father is a very complicated issue. It takes time and energy, interest and responsibility. Most of all, it takes your love of your child.

No two days are the same. Everyday brings new questions and a new challenge. It often leaves ourselves asking: "Where do we learn to be a good father?"

Evans shares that there are five common ways men learn to be fathers. The first way is watching our fathers. If our dad was involved in raising us as kids, or even if he wasn't, many of us will remember and imitate much of what he did. In many ways, our fathers are one of the strongest influences on how we raise own children. Through our connections with our dads, we build a sense of identity for the family. We may pass on family traditions, values, and opinions that continue for generations.

The second way to learn to be a dad is from television, movies, and the media. If you've watched any episodes of "Father Knows Best," "Crosby", or "Home Improvement," you may have picked up some ideas on how fathers stay involved in their families. In 30 minutes or less, these fathers can solve problems that are serious, and perhaps not so serious. They communicate well with their children and always seem to be able to wok it out in the end.

The third way is what's the other guy is doing? Probably one of the best sources of information on how to be a father is watching our friends, brothers, and even strangers parent their children. Since we tend to keep company with people who are generally similar to us, it makes sense that we could learn a lot about being a parent by watching how others do it. We can see if their strategies are successful. We can get new ideas for how to handle situations. If things don't work out so well, we can decide to try a different strategy if we're faced with the same situation.

The fourth way fathers learn to be dads is through videos, magazines, and books. Educational materials such as these are great sources of factual information and advice for being a father. Through these, we learn from experts who have studied fathers for years and can give men many of the "tried and true" strategies for being an effective father.

The last way mentioned was through parenting classes. Parenting classes are often a very useful tool for learning how to be an effective father. Folks often go to parenting classes if they're having a specific problem with their child, but many parents find them valuable even in they are not having any specific problems. Parenting classes are great because they get parents together from various backgrounds to talk about what works and doesn't work for them. They are helpful for practicing new strategies and getting advice on specific issues.

The bottom line is that in order to learn how to be a good father you just have to do it. Your interest in learning to be the best dad that you can be is a great indicator that you are going to be just that, a great father!

Canola Oil Is Safe To Consume

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Canola oil comes from the 'rapeseed" plant. Recently someone reported that rapeseed is toxic to humans and the oil should only be used for industrial purposes.

This is a classic case of "a little bit of knowledge is a dangerous thing."

It's true that original forms of rapeseed contained high levels of erucic acid, a fatty acid that's not exactly healthful for humans and other animals if they're exposed to it in high enough amounts.

But rapeseed oil has been used for centuries for both industrial uses and for cooking in some parts of the world. At that time, most oil prepared from rapeseed contained anywhere from 30 percent to 60 percent erucic acid.

According to the Food and Drug Administration, it wasn't until the 1970s that European researchers found a link between long-term consumption of erucic acid and cardiac lesions, a form of heart disease.

That bit of news spurred on scientists in Canada who were already trying to breed low-erucic-acid rapeseed for food uses. Canada had started growing rapeseed during World War II when European supplies were cut off. Breeders analyzed variety after variety of rapeseed until they found types with very low amounts of erucic acids, and they began a breeding program. By the late 1970s, all Canadian rapeseed produced for food contained less than 2 percent erucic acid.

By the late 1980s, the average amount was 0.6 percent. The Canadian government officially named the new type of oil "canola," short for "Canadian oil."In 1985, the FDA approved canola oil as "GRAS," or generally recognized as safe, as long as it had an erucic acid content of 2 percent or less. That was great timing, because it was just about then that Americans began paying attention to the saturated fat content of their foods. The new canola oil had high levels of oleic acid, a monounsaturated fat. Like polyunsaturated fats, monounsaturated fats are believed to be healthier for the heart than saturated fats.

Olive oil and some forms of sunflower seed and safflower oils also contain higher amounts of monounsaturated fats.

Root Vegetables Differ In Sugar Content

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Are root vegetables, such as turnips, high in sugar content?

Actually, root vegetables vary in the amount of sugar they carry. But first, let's review what we mean by "sugars" and go from there.

Sugars are carbohydrates. Other carbohydrates include starch, which breaks down into sugars as it's digested, and fiber, which passes through the body unscathed (and unabsorbed). Major types of sugar include glucose, fructose, sucrose and lactose. No matter what sort of sugar or starch you consume, it breaks down into glucose as it's digested so your body can use it. Glucose and fructose mainly come from fruits and vegetables, sucrose mainly comes from beet or cane sugar, and lactose comes from milk.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's Standard Nutrient Database doesn't include a separate listing for sugars. Instead, it lists "Total Carbohydrates," which includes sugars, starches and fiber. It also includes a "Total Fiber" category, so you can generally get a sense of total sugar and starch content by subtracting the amount of fiber for any given food from the Total Carbohydrate listed.

However, since you're interested just in sugar content, a 1987 USDA reference work, "Sugar Content of Selected Foods." shows the following data:

- Raw turnips contain 4 grams of sugar.
- Raw beets contain 6 grams.
- Raw carrots contain 7 grams.
- Raw parsnips contain 5 grams.
- Baked potatoes contain 2 grams.
- Baked sweet potatoes contain 11 grams.

Be forewarned, though: Looking at sugar content without also looking at starches can be misleading. Starches break down very easily into sugars once they're consumed. Until the last decade or so, nutritionists didn't realize that.

They thought that sweets like table sugar would cause a spike in blood glucose, whereas complex carbohydrates, like the starch in potatoes, wouldn't. Now they know starches break down quickly and act much like sugary foods once they're in your system.

Healthy Active Kids

When you hear the term "healthy active kids," what do you think of?

If you have a preschooler in your house you already know what constitutes an active child. Preschoolers have an inexhaustible supply of energy and like to move, play, run, climb, jump, and spin.

Just think how tired you are after following them around all day. The average toddler walks about two miles each day!

However, the high activity level of children begins to decrease with age as children become more tuned into television, computers, video games or experience failure at organized sports.

As a teen-ager, I can remember wanting to spend time running to get into shape to play field hockey.

We lived on a farm and my mother thought that it was a bit silly to just run up and down the road. She strongly suggested that I take the push mower and "run around the yard."

Past generations were often very physically active just by the nature of the times. They surely were not near the conveniences that we experience today.

Many families today do not garden or even care for their own lawns (or, if they do, they have a riding mower). They don't clean their own houses, or walk to school or church. Instead most people use drive-through car washes, prescription centers, photo developing centers, fast food restaurants, and remote controls.

Even if your family is involved in agriculture production, the advances in equipment and facilities have reduced the amount of physical exercise that farmers receive.

Children in the U.S. today are no exceptions. They are less fit than they were a generation ago.

Not surprisingly, inactive children, when compared with active children, weigh more, and have higher blood pressure and lower levels of heart protective high-density lipoproteins.

The National Children and Youth Fitness Study indicates that at least half of all youth don't engage in physical activity that promotes long term health benefits. Children spend an average of 17 hours a week watching T.V. in addition to the time they spend on video and computer games.

Our 11-year-old son assures my husband and me that he is the only child in the fifth grade who doesn't have a Nintendo or Game Boy.

With spring just around the corner, encourage your children to get out and get active. Outdoor play provides children the opportunity to be carefree. Unstructured physical play is a well accepted stress reducer for children. Outdoor play enhances physical development such as balance, strength, and cardiovascular endurance, but it is just as nourishing to skills such as perception, navigation, and cooperation.

As parents, you can be a positive role model to children in the area of physical activity. Look for practical ways to be more physically active and let your children be part of your transformation.

Emphasize fitness being fun, not associated with winning or hard work. Participate with your child as often as possible. Your attitude toward movement will make a difference and will help to make your child healthier!

Why not try some of these simple activities to get your children moving: On a breezy day (not high winds) give each child a plastic grocery bag. Throw the bag up in the air.

The grocery bags move slowly through he air to allow children to catch them fairly easily. This activity reinforces the importance of keeping their eye on an object they are trying to catch and can involve lots of running if the breeze is just right. (Be sure young children do not place the bags on their heads and put the bags in the trash when they are done playing). Stuff plastic grocery bags with crumbled newspaper and close with rubber bands. Children can toss the "balls" to each other, throw them up and catch them or make lots of "balls" and have a snowball fight where the snowballs don't hurt.

Take sidewalk chalk and make a large Tic,Tac,Toe board on the cement. Children can jump from square to square, jump forwards and backwards, jump on one foot, hop around the outside squares, and similar activities.

Nutty Recipes

The crunch of peanuts, sweet tang of chutney, and tropical papaya in this healthy salad will make a delightful dish for a luncheon or light supper.

ALMOND CASSATA

10-ounce pound cake
8-ounces ricotta cheese
2 tablespoons light cream
½ teaspoon orange extract
½ cup chopped almonds, toasted
2 tablespoons mixed candied fruits, finely chopped
6-ounces semi-sweet chocolate pieces
2 tablespoons water
¼ cup butter

If top of pound cake is rounded, slice off top to level it. Using sharp knife, cut cake horizontally to make three equal layers. Combine ricotta cheese, sugar, cream, and orange extract in small bowl, beat with electric mixer until smooth.

Add ¼ cup almond, candied fruit, and 2 tablespoons chocolate pieces, finely chopped. Center bottom layer of cake on flat plate, spread with half ricotta mixture. Gently place and spread second and third layers. Refrigerate two hours or until ricotta mixture is firm. Melt remaining chocolate pieces with water in small heavy saucepan over low heat, stir until chocolate is completely melted.

Remove from heat, stir in butter, one tablespoons at a time, continue stirring until mixture is smooth. Refrigerate 30 minutes or until frost is of spreading consistency. With a spatula, spread frosting thinly on top and sides of cake, swirling to decorate. Garnish with remaining almonds. Chill at least 30 minutes before slicing.

The truth about nuts is finally out of its shell. Despite the fact that adding nuts to a diet low in saturated fat and cholesterol can help lower levels LDL cholesterol (or "bad" cholesterol) when substituted for foods high in saturated fat, a recent survey that 61 percent of Americans think nuts are high in cholesterol.

In the past decade, people have avoided fat in foods in pursuit of weight loss, better nutrition, and healthier living. But foods, such as nuts, which contain fat, can be a positive addition to a healthy diet and beneficial to the body.

Planters has developed a helpful nutrition brochure including simple steps to follow for better health and recipes that are easy to prepare.

World's Garden Greats Debut At Philadelphia Flower Show

PHILADELPHIA — Two gilded Sphinxes stand guard and support a massive Egyptian gate at the 2001 Philadelphia Flower Show's presentation of "Great Gardeners of the World," March 4-11, at the Pennsylvania Convention Center.

Ten acres of blooming backyards, front yards, terraces, side yards, streetscapes and sunrooms beckon everyone to the start of the spring gardening season. Major exhibitors from throughout the region have forced, prodded and primped their plants to perfection and provide visitors with exceptional garden designs for the new century. Tradition and New Age unite throughout the exhibition hall with more than 60 magnificent presentations by the region's most talented landscapers, florists, and horticultural institutions. Winterthur (DE) celebrates 50 years and debuts its new Enchanted Garden set to open officially in June, 2001; W. Atlee Burpee Seed Company (PA) celebrates 125 years and explores new territory with perennials and Bartlett Tree Experts (CT) provides a new Asian fusion style of design complete with Chinese tea room and fragrant lilac bamboo forest.

For the indoor gardener, the Show offers more than 2,000 examples of plants, collections, designs and flower arrangements in its Competitive Class division. Amateurs from throughout the world enter their creations into a competition that is judged throughout Show week. Ribbons and medals are presented in most categories on the Show's first weekend along with trophies for the major garden displays. Visitors who come to the Show on multiple days are treated to ever changing artistic floral entries and new winners in the horticultural competition as well as an endless parade of exceptional speakers in free sessions held all week.

Philadelphia Flower Show offers 10 acres of blooming perfection at the Pennsylvania Convention Center, March 4-11.

Home gardeners and nursery professionals will find all their answers and pose new questions throughout the Main Exhibition Hall in the lively, impromptu "Gardener Studios." Two studios set the stage for daily, simultaneous, hourly presentations by regional experts and offer hands-on demonstrations that include dividing perennials and the charming art of worm composting along with many other great garden activities. Each session is complete with a question and answer period in a "stand and share" setting.

For new homeowners and professionals alike, the best woody ornamental plants on the market are showcased in a special display presented by The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society (PHS) with support from the Chanticleer Foundation. The PHS Gold Medal Plant Award (c1978) is made annually to recognize excellence among trees and shrubs hardy in the mid-Atlantic region and to encourage home gardeners to use the plants as the cornerstone of their landscape design. The display boasts new 2001 winners, buying guide and helpful advice from members of the Pennsylvania Landscape Nursery Association. Show "edutainment" is also in full bloom in dozens of free "satellite" activities held daily throughout the 33 acre Convention Center.

Visitors are encouraged to complete their Show experience at the Show Marketplace. With more than 125 vendors, this section of the Show located in the Main Exhibition Hall, brings the garden to the visitor with pots and plants, cut flowers and garden structures, patio furniture and ergonomically correct tools, all of the ingredients to satisfy the most winter-weary among us. Shipping and sturdy tote bags are offered. For those who want to capture the moment forever, a beautifully illustrated Show video, poster and memorabilia are on sale in the "Flower Show Shoppe" in the Main Exhibit Hall. Free official Show floor plan and guide available throughout the venue list sales locations and general Show information.

The Philadelphia Flower Show offers visitors a number of options to extend their stay and visit the massive event over a period of days. Hotels and cultural activities throughout the City have partnered with organizers to create special packages and offers including a discounted two-day Superpass. Working with Amtrak (1-800-USA-RAIL) and Accommodations Express (1-800-380-4683) along with six exceptional hotels, visitors can book their overnight visit to Philadelphia, see the Show, visit museums, take in theatre performances and dine at the nation's most acclaimed restaurants for one exceptional price and lots of value. Visitors should ask for "Flower Show Preferred Hotel Packages" when making reservations.

For day-trippers, the Show offers free, same day re-entry (with hand stamp) and the free Bloomin' Fun Pass available at the Show or online at www.theflowershow.com. The pass lists citywide activities tied into Flower Show Week and offers great sightseeing ideas and valuable savings at dozens of Philadelphia's cultural centers, stores and restaurants.

Visitors who plan their trip to the Show in the evening, Monday through Friday, will experience less crowding. The Show is open Monday through Saturday until 9:30 p.m. Box office closes one hour before Show closing on all days.

Adult ticket prices at the Box Office are: (Opening Day), Sunday, March 4, $24. Monday through Friday, March 5-9, $20. Saturday and Sunday, March 10 and 11, $22. Tickets for children 2-12 are $10 any day. Groups pay $17.50 any day (minimum order is 20 adult tickets). Berks Society 1

The Pleasantville Diner, Oley, served as the meeting place for Berks County Society of Farm Women, Group #1. Twelve members answered roll call to a question put forth to them pertaining to Valentine's Day.

Spring Rally date May 16 at Yoder's in New Holland and Bingo events scheduled for Berks Heim were among the concerns addressed at this time.

Our group was asked if members would help sponsor the Corn Cob Throwing Contest to be held at the Reading Fair. It was the consensus of the group to participate. Members will also be participating in the Oley Valley Graduation Bash held annually by the district during prom season.

After the meeting, valentines that arrived in brown paper bags were distributed to members. Contents ranged in variety from ketchup to flowers!

Next meeting scheduled for March 14 at the home of Donna Haas, Douglassville.

ANSWER — Holly Eshbach, Dover, wanted to know of a way to prevent cream puffs from deflating after they are removed from the oven. Thanks to Dorothy Stoms, Deerfield, N.J., who sends a recipe that she said includes the secret to keep them puffy — putting them back into the oven for 20 minutes.

Cream Puffs

½ cup butter
1 cup boiling water
1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon salt
4 eggs

Melt butter in boiling water. Add flour and salt all at once, stir vigorously. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture forms a ball that doesn't separate. Remove from heat and cool slightly. Add eggs, one at a time, beating vigorously after each until smooth.

Bake in 450 degree oven 15 minutes, then in 325 degree oven 25 minutes. Remove cream puffs from oven; split. Turn off oven and put cream puffs back in oven to dry out, about 20 minutes. Cool on rack.

Just before serving, fill centers with ice cream or French custard filling. Replace tops; drizzle with chocolate sauce. Sprinkle chopped nuts atop. Makes about 10 big puffs.

ANSWER — Erma Zimmerman, Williamsburg, wants a recipe for pesto sauce. Thanks to Valerie Olesh for sending a recipe.

Creamy Pesto Dip

2 cups packed parsley sprigs
⅔ cups walnut pieces
⅓ cup grated parmesan cheese
2 cloves garlic
1 tablespoon dried basil leaves
8-ounces cream cheese, softened
¼ cup milk
Lemon wedge and basil sprig, for garnish
Snack sticks

In electric blender or food processor, blend parsley, walnuts, parmesan cheese, garlic, and basil until finely chopped. Add cream cheese and milk; process until well blended. Cover; chill until serving. Garnish with lemon wedge and basil sprig if desired. Serve as a dip with snack sticks. Yield: 1½ cups.

ANSWER — Margaret Kaltreider, Glenville, wanted a recipe for Irish soda bread. Thanks to Hermie Potts, N.J., for sending a recipe that she writes is very good.

Irish Soda Bread

1½ cups raisins
4 cups flour sifted
½ teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons sugar
2 eggs, beaten
1½ cups buttermilk
½ cup butter, softened
3 teaspoons caraway seeds (optiona)

Heat oven to 450 degrees. Mix raisins with flour, baking soda, baking powder, salt, and sugar. Cut in butter with pastry blender or two knives until the consistency of coarse cornmeal.

Gradually add buttermilk and eggs, mix gently until just moistened. Knead lightly until smooth on floured board. Shape into round loaf. Put dough in a greased round baking pan. With sharp knife, cut a cross on top of the dough. Bake 10 minutes at 450 degrees, reduce heat to 350 degrees and bake 45 more minutes. Cool on wire rack. Slice and eat.

ANSWER — Another solution for Frances Hanlin who was having trouble churning butter is sent by a reader who said that cream might be too warm when churning. Let the cream set at room temperature for one hour and then churn.

ANSWER — Rose Camata, Covington, requests a recipe for white boiled icing for cakes. Thanks to Dorothy Stoms, N.J., and an anonymous reader for sending several recipes.

Boiled White Icing

Stir until sugar is dissolved and bring to a boil:

2 cups sugar
1 cup water

Cover and cook about 3 minutes or until the steam has washed down any crystals which may have formed on the sides of the pan. Uncover and cook to 238-240 degrees. At the temperature the syrup will spin a very thin thread on the end of a coarser thread. This final thread will almost disappear, like a self-consuming spider web.

Whip until frothy:

2 egg whites
⅛ teaspoon salt

Add the syrup in a thin stream, whipping eggs constantly, when these ingredients are all combined, add:

⅛ teaspoon cream of tartar or a few drops lemon juice
1 teaspoon vanilla

Seven Minute White Icing

A very fluffy, delightful icing that never fails. Place in the top of a double boiler and beat until thoroughly blended:

2 unbeaten egg whites
1½ cups sugar
5 tablespoons cold water
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
1½ teaspoons light corn syrup

Place these ingredients over rapidly boiling water. Beat them constantly with a rotary beater or with a wire whisk for seven minutes. Remove icing from heat. Add:

1 teaspoon vanilla

Continue beating until the icing is the right consistency to be spread. At this point you may add (optional)

½ cup chopped nuts or grated coconut or 1 stick crushed peppermint candy.

Makes about 2 cups frosting.

Here's one for chocolate cooked icing from Mildred Miller, Hershey.

Chocolate Cooked Icing

1 cup sugar
3½ tablespoons cornstarch
6 tablespoons cocoa
Pinch salt
1 cup water
2 tablespoons vegetable oil

Mix water with cornstarch in saucepan. Combine cocoa and oil. Add to cornstarch mixture and remaining ingredients while cooking over low heat, about 10 minutes, stirring constantly.

ANSWER — Jacob Beiler, Holtwood, requested recipes for cheese making. Also, he would like to know where to buy rennet tablets. Thanks to a reader for recommending the following source: New England Cheesemaking Supply Co., P.O. Box 85, Main St., Ashfield, MA 01330. Here are several recipes.

Mozzarella Cheese

Pour one gallon milk (can use skim) into container, add 3 tablespoons buttermilk or 1 tablespoon vinegar to milk. Stir well and let set from 6-12 hours.

Heat milk to 90 degrees and stir in ½ rennet tablet dissolved in one tablespoon cold water.

Remove from heat, cover, let set in warm spot for 30 minutes or until the curds are set.

Break it into small pieces with your hands. Place mixture over low heat, stirring occasionally with your hands. When the curds begin to stick together, gather into a mass and put into cheese press (or into a colander lined with a light weight material).

Press cheese for 30 minutes, adding more weight (10 pounds is sufficient) every 5 minutes (can use a jar and add water and compare with water weight for proper amount).

Take cloth off cheese and put in back into the whey. Heat slowly over low heat to slightly below boiling. Remove cheese from whey and put into cloth. Leese drain overnight.

Remove from cloth. Wrap and freeze until needed. Yield: about 1 pound. Mild-Flavored Hard Cheese

Heat 2 gallons milk in stainless steel kettle to 180-190 degrees. If it boils, it will work, but cheese will be drier. Remove from heat and add vinegar until it separates (approximately ½ cup). Pour cheese into a colander to drain the whey. Once it's drained, add 2½ teaspoons salt to the curds using a fork to stir. While still hot, put the curds into some kind of mold with holes at the bottom and sides so it can drain. (Try using the top of a vegetable blancher). Cut a plastic lid to fit and punch holes for the top. For weight, fill 5-quart plastic ice cream pail with water. Or put a cheesecloth into the colander and gather the curds tightly in the cloth and let set. Let it drip and harden in a cold place overnight. Remove from mold and enjoy.

For cottage cheese, cool curds in whey. Drain through cloth, allowing curds to drip dry. Place them in a bowl and add salt, enough milk to moisten the curds.

What's This In My Food?

TUNKHANNOCK (Wyoming Co.) — Although many of us never give them a thought, we count on a variety of food ingredients to make food more appealing to the senses, provide nutritional benefits and keep food fresh longer, among other things. These ingredients can cause concern and confusion among consumers — especially if they have chemical names. Actually, many of these additives are quite familiar, they just go by more scientific names when used on food labels. For example, ascorbic acid is another name for vitamin C and alphatocopherol is vitamin E.

• What Do They All Do? There are approximately 3,000 food additives used in this country, and many of them are common food ingredients we use at home every day, such as sugar or baking soda. Food additives are divided into categories based on function. Some of the basic categories are: acidulants, antioxidants, colors, emulsifiers, flavors and flavor enhancers, gums, preservatives, sweeteners and vitamins/minerals.

• Acidulants. A lemon-lime beverage or food product wouldn't have that refreshing tartness without an acidulant ingredient. Basically, acidulants are acids that are used for flavoring, as preservatives, for gelling and coagulation, and to help prevent oxidation of fats and oils. Examples of acidulants include citric acid, tartaric acid, lactic acid, adipic acid, and malic acid.

• Antioxidants. Many of us are familiar with the term "antioxidants" from a health perspective. In this context, however, the antioxidants are added to delay or prevent rancidity. Over time, fats and oils that come in contact with oxygen from the air can become rancid — developing unpleasant off-flavors and odors. Two of the most commonly used antioxidants are BHA, or butylated hydroxyanisole, and BHT, or butylated hydroxytoluene. Natural antioxidants such as tocopherols (forms of vitamin E) and guaiac gum are also used. Food to which antioxidants are added include fats and oils, cereals, and high-fat foods such as doughnuts and chips.

• Colors. Almost everyone has had fun mixing up colored frosting or coloring homemade playclay with food colors. Food colors, dyes and pigments used in food, drugs and cosmetics are regulated by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA), and require testing similar to that required for other food additives. Colors are either classified as "certified" or "exempt from certification." All nine certified colors are artificial, and most are named with the color name and number, (e.g., Red #2, Yellow #5). Exempt colors are frequently derived from natural sources such as vegetables, and also must meet certain criteria for purity and safety. Examples of exempt colors include substances such as annatto extract (yellow), dehydrated beets (bluish-red to brown), caramel (yellow to tan), bet-carotene (yellow to orange) and grape skin extract (red, green).

• Emulsifiers. In food science classes, making salad dressing or mayonnaise is the classic lesson for teaching what emulsions are. With proper mixing, fat or oil and water will combine to become an emulsion. In food products, emulsifiers are added to keep emulsified products stable, reduce stickiness, control crystallization, keep ingredients dispersed (such as spices within a salad dressing) and to help products dissolve more easily (such as powdered coffee creamer). They work because their chemical structure attracts fats on one end and water on the other, thereby letting the two substances combine easily. Common emulsifiers include lecithin (often made from soybeans), alginates (chemical salts found in algae) and mono- and diglycerides (syrup- or fat-like substances found in alcohols).

• Flavors and Flavor Enhancers. We all like our food pleasing flavors, and the food industry relies on various substances to provide the flavors that consumers demand, Spices and herbs, essential oils and their extracts, fruit and fruit juices and manufactured (also called "artificial") compounds are classified as flavors. Often, both natural and artificial flavors are used together in one food item.

Broad Street Market, Harrisburg, celebrated National Potato Month by holding potato cooking demonstrations throughout February. Chef Carrie Bogar, Empire Restaurant, Carlisle, prepares potato soup seasoned with roasted garlic, spices, and cream for visitors to sample. The market also held a potato art contest for kids and a potato lovers recipe contest.

Somewhat less understood are flavor enhancers, the most common of which is probably monosodium glutamate, or MSG. Since 1909 when it was first manufactured, MSG has been used in a variety of foods, including meat and poultry items, soups and broths, salad dressings and sauces. MSG is the sodium salt of glutamic acid (glutamate), which is one of the most common amino acids found in nature. Although it has no taste of its own, MSG works to enhance the flavors already present in foods. The overall taste effect contributed by glutamate is savory or meaty.

• Gums. Gums provide thickness to foods and help form gels in products such as frozen desserts, candies, salad dressings, puddings, and whipped toppings. They're also used to keep ingredients suspended in a food and to inhibit crystallization, among other functions. Gums are classified by source, such as seaweed (which includes agar, alginates, carrageenan), plant seed gums (which include pectin), fermentation gums (which include xanthan gum), plant exudates (which include gum arabic) and cellulose derivatives.

• Preservatives. Because of preservatives, bread does not grow mold overnight, but remains fresh for several days. Preservatives can be antimicrobials, antioxidants, or both. As antioxidants, they keep foods from becoming rancid and turning brown. As antimicrobials, they inhibit the growth of bacteria, yeast and mold.

Food additives are very tightly regulated. The Food Additives Amendment to the U.S. Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act, implemented in 1958, assigned proof for additive safety to the food industry. The degree of safety testing necessarily became very high because the industry had to prove additives were safe before they could be used.

Consumers can easily see which food additives are present in a food by reading the ingredient statement on the product label — the FDA requires all additives and ingredients to be listed. Food additives play many important roles in our food supply, helping to ensure that the wide array of foods we eat are safe, wholesome and tasty.

Scooters Are Back

The return of these retro-runners has taken many by surprise. Lots of accidents occur with the use of scooters. Here are some safety tips from the National SAFE KIDS Campaign:

• Always wear a helmet, wrist guards, and elbow and knee pads when riding a scooter.

• Be sure protective gear fits properly and does not interfere with the rider's movement, vision, or hearing.

• Children ages eight and under should not use scooters without close adult supervision.

• Before using a scooter, the rider or parent should check it thoroughly for hazards such as: loose, broken, or cracked parts; sharp edges on metal boards; slippery top surface; and wheels with nicks and cracks. Defects should be corrected by a qualified repairperson.

• Ride scooters on smooth, paved surfaces free from traffic. Avoid riding on streets or surfaces with water, sand, gravel, or dirt.

• Do not ride the scooter at night.

• Never hitch a ride from a car, bus, truck, bicycle, etc., and limit usage of the scooter to one person at a time.

• Use caution when riding the scooter downhill. If a steep hill is encountered, step off the scooter and walk to the bottom of the hill.

Keep Kids Active In Winter

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Children need to be active every day. It keeps them healthy and helps them grow. A good child care program will have large indoor and outdoor play areas. If children are dressed in warm clothing and waterproof boots, they can play outside in winter, unless the weather is really bad. There are also many types of indoor active play activities.

Parents, does your caregiver plan different ways for your child to be active each day? Check the daily schedule. Take time to visit when you can.

Here are some ways to keep kids active and busy.

Outside:

• Take walks. This is fun for children of all ages.

• Make snow people, snow structures, and snow angels.

• Play games such as Follow the Leader and Tag.

• Go sledding or sliding on a small slope. Flat pieces of cardboard work well for this activity.

• Throw snowballs at a target such as a tree, laundry basket, or box. This is a safe way to organize snowball throwing.

Inside:

• Play games such as Duck, Duck, Goose and other circle games.

• Dance to music.

• Have a parade with pretend instruments.

• Act out a story.

• Do jumping and hopping activities.

• Sing action songs.

• Play beanbag toss games.

• Do simple exercises.

Caregivers can get new ideas from free educational materials available at Penn State Cooperative Extension's Better Kid Care office. Call 1-800-452-9108 for information and to order.

Explaining Death To Children

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — What would you say to your child who asks, "When will Grandpa wake up?" not long after Grandpa has just died?

On any ordinary lazy Sunday afternoon, the child might have asked this question at least a dozen times. He was anxious for his Grandpa to awake from his customary nap in his big, overstuffed chair. But this isn't any ordinary Sunday afternoon. And Grandpa isn't taking his customary nap.

You and your family have just arrived at the funeral parlor to receive the hundreds of relatives and friends who will come to the viewing. The child could be two or four or even older. After shuffling as slowly as possible into the room where Grandpa's body is, the child rushes up beside the casket and turns to you with the question, "When will Grandpa wake up?"

For some parents this is not a difficult question. They answer honestly and use language and ideas that the child will understand.

"Grandpa is dead — he won't wake up."

"What is dead, Mommy?"

"Dead means that Grandpa stopped breathing and his heart stopped beating (working). Grandpa won't ever move again. He won't wake up."

"Why, Mommy?"

"Because everything that lives will die someday."

"I want Grandpa to wake up, Mommy."

"I know you do, and so do I, but Grandpa won't wake up."

"I'll miss Grandpa."

"So will I — we will all miss him very much. We are all very sad. That's why Mommy and Daddy are crying. Are you sad?"

"Yes, Mommy."

"It's okay to be sad, and it's okay to cry because you loved Grandpa and you miss him. Come climb up on Mommy's lap and let's be sad together."

In this example, the mother is honest and tries to explain to the child what death is, being careful to keep the explanation straightforward, but simple. The mother also recognizes that the child needs some comfort and security — they are sad together, holding one another.

Other parents try to deny death. They may keep the subject of death from the children, thinking they are too young to deal with it. These parents evade children's questions or give half answers or tell the child something false such as "Grandpa went to sleep." The child either becomes afraid to go to sleep at night or lives each day waiting for Grandpa to wake up.

Sometimes parents keep a child ignorant of death by not being honest with the child when news of a loved one's death arrives. The telephone call brings sad news that Aunt Jane just died.

Mother or Dad begins to cry.

The child asks, "What's wrong, Daddy?"

"Nothing!" is shot back.

The child may think that she had done something wrong, may feel guilty, and tries to understand what she has done to get the adults all upset.

It is strange that some parents will not talk about death with children. Sometimes these same parents allow their children to see death in living color! If the children watch television it is difficult to escape seeing a dead person, if only on the evening news.

It is also strange that some children are kept in the dark about death, since not many years ago death was an accepted part of everyone's life. In years gone by, people died at home and were waked in the home. But with the introduction of modern medical treatment, hospitals came into existence. Many people die away from home. Thus death has become separated from the family.

Regardless of where people die, death is a part of life and children do come in contact with death at an early age. We can help children understand death by talking about it and by honestly answering their questions. We can help prepare children to deal with death by acknowledging that they have a need and a right to mourn the same as an adult does.

There are many opportunities to talk about death. If you have pets — dog, cat or even goldfish the occasion may be present. You may use the sight of a dead animal along the road to spark discussion about death.

Children can be given the opportunity to mourn. Some parents are against taking the children to the funeral parlor, or to the church for funeral services, or to the cemetery. However, these experiences are a part of life that children can understand, if we but take the time to explain and have the appropriate attitude about death (and life).

The inevitable question that almost every child will ask, surfaced at the funeral parlor late that night after all the relatives and friends had left: "Daddy, will I die?" With a bit of a lump in his throat, the father said:

"Yes, but not for a long, long time."

"Will you die, Daddy?"

"Yes, but not for a long, long time."

With that the family went home. There was a note of peace about them. Everybody knew about all there was to know about Grandpa's death — they had been honest with one another.

vents farm couples from sharing stress and personal feelings.

"Knowing that you do not face these problems alone can begin the healing process of a stressful situation. Everyone needs to know that someone else cares about them."

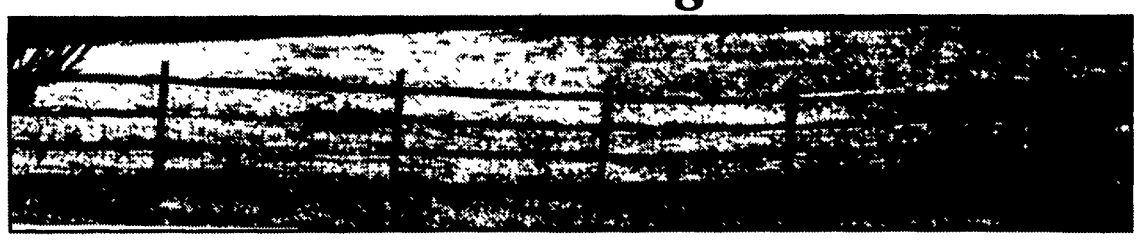
Worry is like a rocking horse, because it gives you something to do but gets you nowhere. It is important to identify the source of worry and than take into consideration a research study that revealed the following:

- 44 percent of the things that people worried about had already happened and nothing could be done to change what had happened in the past.
- 26 percent of the things people worried about would never happen to begin with.
- 22 percent of the things that people worried about cannot be changed. If it happens, it happens and nothing can be done to change it.
- 8 percent of the things that people worried about could actually be changed by some control the person has to do something about the situation.

Sense of Humor

Keep a sense of humor in a stressful situation. Hanson said

Like 'Fence Posts Talking To Each Other'



Unfortunately, many family members interact similar to fence posts when it comes to communication — they neither talk nor listen.

Understanding each other is often as confusing as this statement: "I know you think that you heard what I said, but what you heard is not what I said."

that his wife has three television programs that she likes to watch and does not want to be interrupted while watching them. Whenever Hanson attempts to ask a question during these episodes, she waves him aside or nods yes.

Her response is often inconvenient for Hanson, and he jokes that sometime he is going to tell his wife he is leaving her to marry the neighbor woman, and his wife will nod OK.

Making a joke of the situation relieves the frustration Hanson feels.

Follow Through

While couples often believe that settling an argument solves the problem Hanson advises more steps to take.

- Achieve a personal balance between farm work and a time to relax with family members.
- Express appreciation for your spouse and other family members. Too often, individuals involved in a farming operation have a definite feeling of being taken for granted. It is not always the words spoken, but the words left unspoken that can cause a rift in relationships.

Learn to say, "I love you. I appreciate you. I need you."

Hanson said, "Those words are often left unsaid until it is too late to salvage a relationship."

A farm wife once told Hanson, "If my husband just told me that he loved me and cared about me as much as his new tractor, I would have stayed on the farm, and found a way to save my marriage."

Another wife told Hanson, "The only thing that my husband and I share together is our mailing address, and now I am going to change that."

It is extremely easy to get so wrapped up in the working demands of the farming operation itself that we often forget or even ignore the needs and personal feelings of those we love the most in our lives.

Hanson jokes that the best way to test the strength of a farm marriage is to let a husband and wife sort livestock together on a hot summer day. Or watch the reaction of a spouse when his wife brings home the wrong combine repair part.

Too many family members assume that they'll have more time to spend and share together next year. Or they intend to share their personal feelings for their spouse later, but never find the time.

Determine to take positive steps now to share your feelings and build closer family ties.

"Family strengths are important to everyone," Hanson said. "The family is a personal refuge and caretaker of its members. Families sustain us in difficult times, share our dreams, and become a part of our pleasures and memories throughout life."

Kohl Outlines Ways To Navigate In Changing Global Marketplace

LOU ANN GOOD

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — World trade ushers in both hope and fear for farmers.

Hope that they can export surpluses and command higher prices for products for which they labor so intensely, but fear of other countries producing food cheaper and forcing the U.S. out of world trade markets.

Dr. David Kohl, economist and professor of agriculture finance at Virginia Tech, allayed some of these fears during last week's First Union agri-educational seminar at the Farm and Home Center.

"North America is a strong, dominant player in the world agricultural marketplace, and should continue to be so in the future," Kohl said.

Although South America shows enormous potential for food imports and has the benefit of fertile soil, a long growing season, low labor costs, and close proximity to many markets, the country is at potential risk.

"Both political and financial stability threatens South America," Kohl said. "The jury is still out," Kohl said on South America's impact on world trade.

Ag terrorism is rampant and will continue to be so.

In a recent visit to South Africa, Kohl noticed machine guns mounted on tractors as standard equipment.

"If a neighbor decides he wants to take over the farm, he does," Kohl said of the daily peril farm owners face from political instability that enables rampant crime.

South Africa and many other third world countries face an additional crisis. They have low labor costs, but the labor force is not trained and doesn't want to be, according to Kohl.

The slowing economy in the U.S., Kohl believes, cannot be salvaged by lowering interest rates. He attributes the sluggish economy to gearing up for a Y2K that never came and U.S. technology leveling out. With no revolutionary technical advances in the last two years, technical markets have caused NASDAQ, Dow, and the S&P to fall.

Kohl also believes that a sliding economy is a result of consumers already utilizing home equity loans and credit cards and no longer having any options to continue buying.

A slowing economy has a bright side for farmers, according to Kohl. "People will eat before they buy gadgets," he said of the reason that farmers will experience a softer landing during a recession.

A slowing economy may result in declining land values because urban dwellers will be less likely to buy land for recreational and investment purposes.

Kohl challenged farmers to focus on things they can manage and develop labor management skills. "Think global, but act local," Kohl said of the increasing need for farmers to wrestle with local zoning laws to protect their right to farm.

Kohl foresees future wars over water.

"No magic silver bullet exists," Kohl said of guaranteeing financial success in farming. "It's doing thousands of little things," he said, of the need for farmers to be good marketers and adopt technology selectively in order to adapt to a changing marketplace.

"People will eat before they buy gadgets," said Dr. David Kohl, Virginia Tech.

Trade Embargoes, Sanctions Hurt Farmers, Children

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — "Whether we like it or not, we are a global marketplace," said Orion Samuelson.

In his 50 years as broadcaster for the U.S. Farm Report, Samuelson said globalization is the biggest change in agriculture. No longer are farmers only concerned about local weather, but they realize that "world weather" will affect grain industry prices.

Samuelson believes that embargoes and sanctions placed on other countries hurts U.S. farmers and the children in that country more than the government that is being disciplined.

Cuba, he said, is an example. It's been 50 years since the U.S. cut off diplomatic relationships with Cuba in hopes of deterring Castro's control.

"It didn't work. Castro is still there. He isn't going away," Samuelson said.

Instead, Cuba is buying grain and other commodities elsewhere, although they would prefer to buy from the U.S. to save transport costs.

Cuban children are suffering medically because embargoes prevent shipment of medicine.

"People get hurt. American producers lose," Samuelson said of trade embargoes.

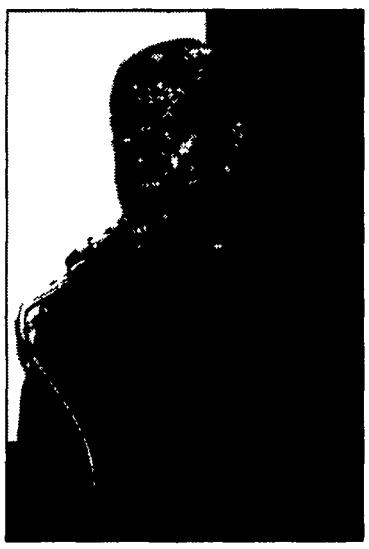
"We need to open and expand markets," Samuelson of his belief in a global marketplace.

Samuelson also addressed biotechnology concerns. "Science must be the benchmark, not emotion," he said of dissidents to biotechnology advances.

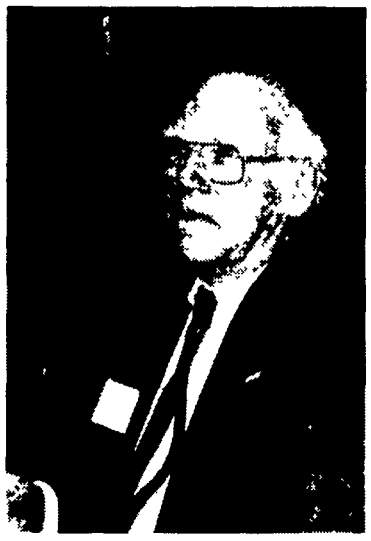
"It's impossible to put on anyone's dinner plate without disturbing someone's environment," he said. "With all the technology, we lose sight of common sense."

In his address at First Union's 20th annual agri-educational seminar Feb. 22 at the Farm and Home Center, Samuelson also predicted that change will continue to impact agriculture.

"One half of our young people will end up in jobs not even invented yet," he said.



Orion Samuelson is the voice behind the U.S. Farm Report heard on 370 radio and 190 television stations.



Also at the seminar, Barry Flinchbaugh, left, Kansas State University professor, and H. Louis Moore, Penn State economist, conducted a spirited debate on the state of the economy for 2001. Both economists do not foresee a recession but a low growth rate. "If we keep talking recession, we will talk ourselves into it," Flinchbaugh said of the media's doom and gloom reporting.

West Snyder FFA Aids Ronald McDonald House

The West Snyder FFA Chapter collected about 1,300 food items worth an estimated $835 and donated $68 to the Snyder County Farm Bureau, which in turn made the donation to the Ronald McDonald House in Danville.

The food drive was conducted Jan. 22 to Feb. 1 in cooperation with the Snyder County Farm Bureau and the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau National Food Checkout Day Program.

Along with the members of the West Snyder FFA Chapter, donations were made by West Snyder High School students. Local businesses who also made donations included Tom's Market in Beavertown, Beaver Motors, and Saylors Market in Beaver Springs.

At West Snyder High School, the senior class had the largest number of items donated with 709. Mr. Wagner's 12th grade homeroom donated the most number of items of any homeroom. They won a pizza party sponsored by the West Snyder FFA Chapter. The faculty and staff donated 199 food items. The ninth grade class placed third by donating 177 food items.

Feb. 7 served as National Food Checkout Day. Food Checkout Day was established to emphasize the affordability of food in America. Statistics show that between Jan. 1 and Feb. 7, the average American family earns enough money to feed their family for the entire year.

The donation toward the Ronald McDonald House was selected by the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau. The Ronald McDonald House was selected because it serves as a "home away from home" for families of children who are critically ill.

4-H HAPPENINGS

North Mountain 4-H Club

The last meeting of the North Mountain 4-H Club was in Jan. at the Water Works Firehall.

Congratulations to anyone who entered animals or items at the Farm Show. The Ronald McDonald House appreciated the soda tabs that members of the club gave to them.

The 4-H Club would also like to thank anyone who donated items to the Ronald McDonald House, the club collected 266 items. The food that is donated to the house is given to the families staying at the house.

On Dec. 28, members of the club went to the Mennonite Central Committee in Ephrata and packed boxes of baby kits, first aid kits, clothing, soap, and shoes. These items are then sent to flood victims around the world.

The American Honey Queen presented a talk about farming. New projects are Adopt-A-Tree, backyard poultry, entomology, pigmy goats, and sign language. Demonstrations at the next morning will be crafts, and cooking. For Valentine's Day, different members in the club made valentines for the veterans at the Veterans Hospital in Lebanon.

The next meeting will be Feb. 26 at the Water Works Firehall, 6:30-8 p.m.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Maybe I don't have a greenhouse, but my 98 flower pots almost make me feel as though I have one. There are half a dozen on the floor and an enormous poinsettia on the coffee table. It was a gift that I received before Christmas. Then I received a very large, heavy basket with 11 different plants in it. I separated them into several pots and gave our daughter the basket. All that I need is one more thing to store. No, not really.

Recently, I took a large box and a bag of cards to a retirement home as I simply can't store everything. Some cards were 30 years old, but I am glad someone can use them and their stamps.

We only subscribe to a few magazines, but I have trouble finding time to read them. It seems that a newspaper comes every day, and I do like to read it. Allen finds more time to read than I do, but just now he is cutting down trees to sell. He had a 35-foot long black walnut that was 28-inches across and no side limbs. Most trees are smaller than that. He expects to have some locust posts sawed too.

As our son burns wood in his furnace, my husband has been kept rather busy keeping the shed full of wood. He can burn large chunks and if the fire dies down the furnace will automatically switch to fuel oil. This is a good arrangement.

As we live along the Conestoga River, we see thousands of geese flying. Not necessarily to the north, but rather in circles when they are disturbed. Eventually, they again settle on the river and meadow banks. The wild ducks live in a different area of the water. They are all a sign that spring is near.

Infant/Child/Adult CPR

All childcare providers are invited to a hands-on training on how to properly administer CPR on infants, small children and even adults. An EMT from the Ebensburg Area Ambulance will conduct this three hour training on March 8, from 6:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. at the Cambria County Extension Office.

To register, send $10 with your name, address and phone number to: Cambria County Cooperative Extension, P.O. Box 390, 499 Manor Drive, Ebensburg, PA 15931. Registration deadline is March 5. DPW training credits will be three hours. If you have any questions, call the Extension Office at 472-7986.

You Can Walk On Me

Adam Downing

EBENSBURG (Cambria Co.) — I withstand an amazing amount of abuse! Sometimes it's just too much.

The names I've been called!

Even though people can't live without me, many dump their problems on me! I was here before you; I will be here after you; I am all over the world.

What am I? — From dirtballs to mudslides, I am soil.

Most of the world's population lives in an intimate relationship with soil. Even with all of our sophistication and automation, we still depend on soil. Without soil we would not eat today, sleep in a house tonight, or drive a car tomorrow. It is the medium for plant growth; provides us with foundations for building; and, by its sheer weight and ability to decompose plant and animal matter, soil helped create fossil fuels.

When soil heath is compromised, so is its ability to provide benefits. Many factors are necessary for soil health, including the level and balance of nutrients. For the most part, forest soils have excellent nutrient content thanks to the forest ecosystem's natural system of cycling nutrients from the soil, to plants and animals, and back to the soil again. Because of this cycle, nutrients remain available for plant growth. The forest floor, with a healthy covering of leaf litter, protects the soil from the direct impact of rain drops that can cause compaction and erosion.

The annual fall of leaves helps to replenish essential nutrients. While many agricultural systems require heavy equipment to "work" the soil for crop growth, natural processes and organisms that live in the soil usually condition the forest soils sufficiently for tree growth. Aside from flooding and air-borne sources, forest soils generally have little pollution to deal with. Conversely, urban soils must contend with salt, exhaust, oil, gas, and other contaminants that run off from parking lots and roads.

Pennsylvanians benefit greatly from soils covered by forests. Streams and groundwater that have their source in forested watersheds provide clean water to our homes, municipalities, and businesses.

To protect forest soils, private landowners can insist that all forest management practices that take place on their land follow the Best Management Practices (BMPs) for Pennsylvania Forests. The BMPs were developed by a consensus among natural resource professionals, forest landowners, scientists, and representatives from forest industries and environmental organizations. The objective of BMPs is to ensure that both the short-term and long-term aspects of forest management activities have a beneficial effect on the entire forest ecosystem.

BMPs designed to protect soils include preventing soil contamination and minimizing compaction and rutting. BMPs to prevent soil from washing in to water resources include designing roads that shed water quickly and avoid steep slopes and wet areas, using bridges or culverts to cross streams, and providing buffers near watercourses and wetlands.

For more information about protecting forest soils, contact your county service forester or Cooperative Extension Office.

The Pennsylvania Forest Stewardship Program helps forestland owners learn how to improve and maintain the ecological health of their lands. To find out more about this voluntary program or request free publications about Best Management Practices, contact the Forest Stewardship Program at Penn State's School of Forest Resources at (800) 235-WISE.

You ask

This column is for readers who have questions but don't know who to ask for answers.

"You Ask—You Answer" is for non-cooking questions. When a reader sends in a question, it will be printed in the paper. Readers who know the answer are asked to respond by mailing the answer, which will then be printed in the paper.

ANSWER — Kelly Nunamaker, Imler, is planning a birthday party for her husband who collects and restores Minneapolis Moline tractors and toys. She requested suggestions for the menu and decorating ideas carrying out that theme. She also wanted personal stories, pictures, copies of ads and any other information pertaining to M. Moline tractors. Thanks to Phil Smith for e-mailing that he thinks the Minneapolis-Moline tractor theme is a wonderful idea for a birthday party. Large bookstores such as Borders Book Store stocks a number of books about MM tractors. He recommends "Vintage Farm Tractors," by Ralph W.Sanders, and "Iron Will" by Country Books/Reiman Publications. The book contains heartwarming stories and phots about running and restoring MM tractors. For additional material, Smith recommends checking out the following three websites: www.mineapolis-moline.com; www.diamond-farm.com; and www.motorbooks.com.

ANSWER — For the reader who wants to know how to store garlic, Catherine Parrish writes that she keeps garlic in a plastic pint-size jar with a large paper napkin placed inside to absorb the moisture and keep the garlic from sprouting. If the napkin becomes damp, replace it with a dry one. You can also freeze the cloves in a jar and use as fresh garlic. It freezes very well.

ANSWER — A reader wrote that a line was missing from the reprinted chorus to the song, "How Betsy made the Flag. The correct words are "She took some red for the blood they shed, some white for purity. Some stars so bright from the sky o'er head, some blue for loyalty. And sewed them all together for loyal hearts and true, and hand-in-hand as one we stand, for the red, white, and blue."

Collector Hunts, Fishes For Rare Licenses

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

BELLEVILLE (Mifflin Co.) — "It's weird to some people what others collect," Forrest Kauffman of Belleville, Mifflin County, says with a grin.

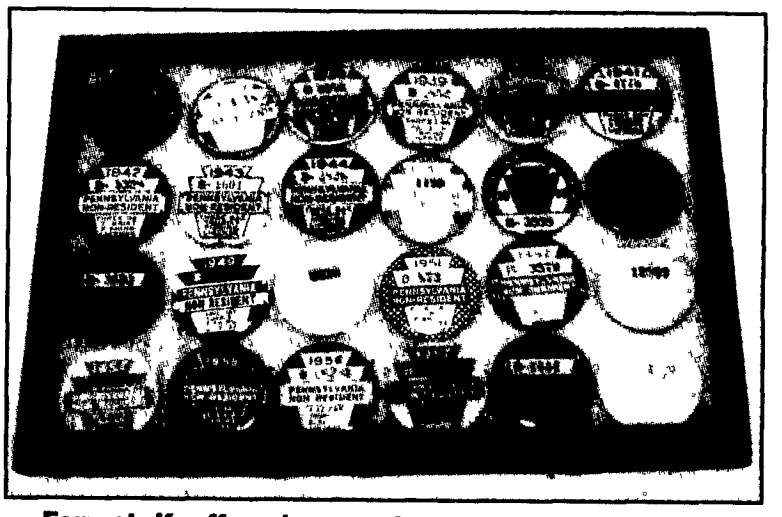
He pulls out a boxed display tray of tourist fishing license buttons, items normally thought of as hobby collectibles, not as expensive antiques.

He points to one issued in 1936 and said, "I bought this one several years ago for $900."

Forrest was not misled by a bad deal. This very knowledgeable and veteran antique collector knew precisely its worth. He keeps his collection of fishing and hunting licenses in a huge antique floor-to-ceiling safe that once held jewelry at Royal Jewelers in Lewistown.

"I started collecting hunting and fishing licenses 25 years ago when I started running out of room for antiques. I thought they wouldn't take up much room. Guess again," he laughs.

He has attended a license collector's show in Milesburg several times where only licenses are offered for sale — hunting, fishing, car, and even dog licenses.



Forrest Kauffman's complete set of fishing license buttons includes years 1936 through 1959. After 1959, they issued paper licenses.

"I started collecting hunting and fishing licenses 25 years ago when I started running out of room for antiques. I thought they wouldn't take up much room. Guess again."

Forrest Kauffman
Mifflin County Collector

"There are even people who collect dog license tags. Issuing dog licenses started in 1907, but I don't collect them.

The first Pennsylvania hunting license was allocated in 1913. From 1913 to 1923, they were made of cloth; from 1924 to 1926, they were made of aluminum; from 1927 to 1941, they were made of tin. Then during the war, metal was scarce, and they changed to heavy paper."

Even today, each county is numbered alphabetically, and, for identification, hunters and fishers could only purchase a license in the county they lived in, even though they could hunt or fish anywhere in Pennsylvania. Each license was numbered as to how many were allotted.

"There are so many ways to collect," Forrest continues. "You can collect only the county you live in or the county you hunt in. I've been collecting the metal licenses for all 67 counties from 1924 to 1937, the last year they put county numbers on them — that's 938 hunting licenses. I only need eight more."

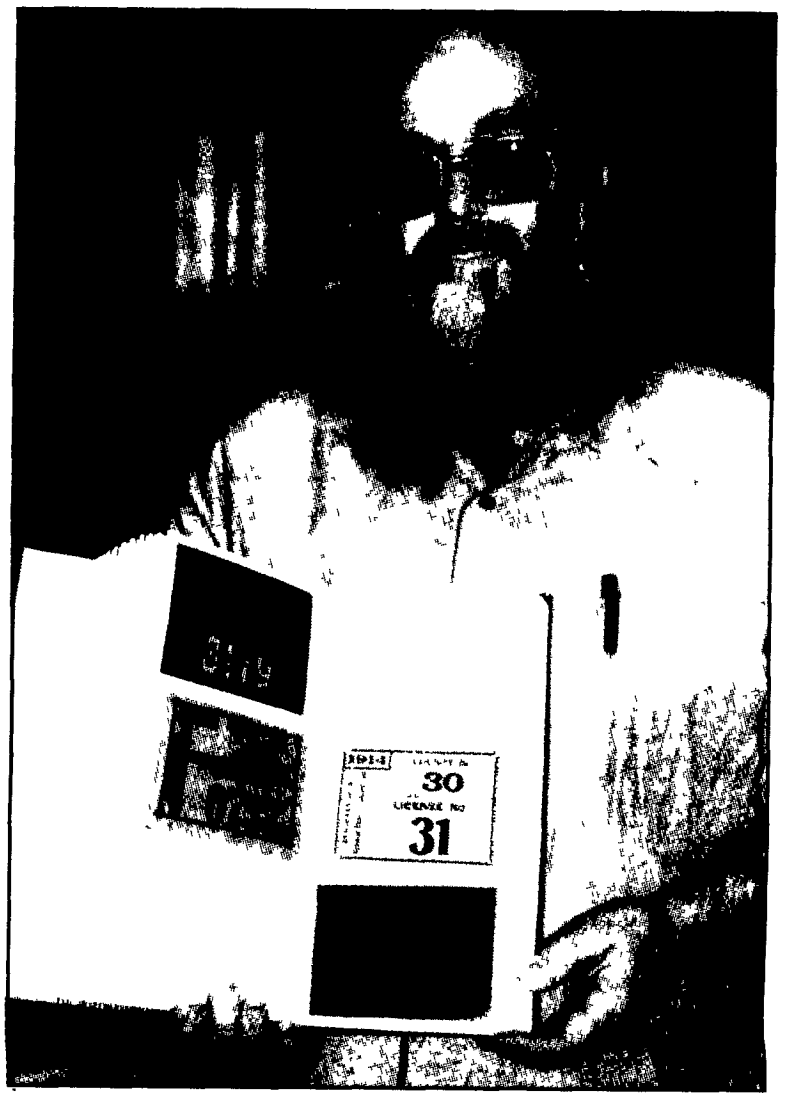
As for doe licenses, Forrest has been collecting every year in every county starting with the year 1951. "They didn't issue 1954 or 1956 because there were no doe seasons then, too controversial."

Delaware County is the hardest to get. It's a small county and not many deer were there. They only allocated 30 for the first three years. Also, some county people bought them and burned or destroyed them to save a doe. They did that for a lot of counties. It's hard to get licenses for the early years for Allegheny, Washington, Beaver, Greene, Delaware, and Montour counties.

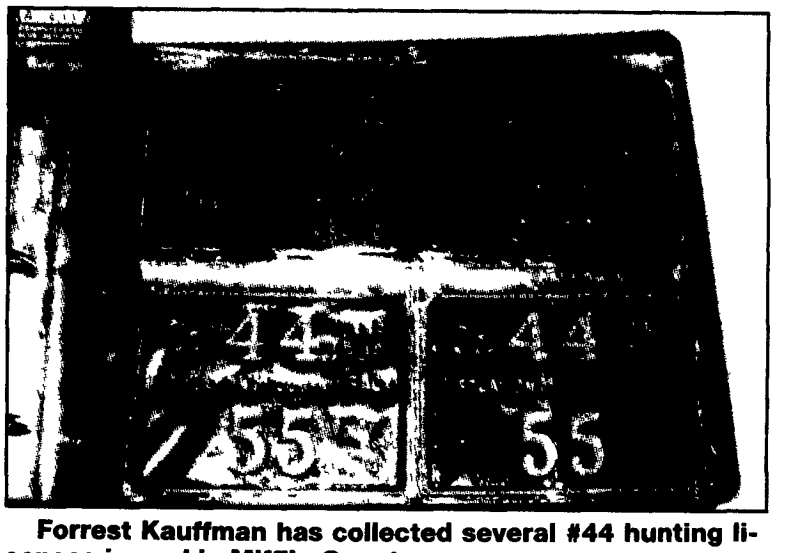
More than 3,200 doe licenses were allocated I need less than 100." Forrest's collection is obviously an ongoing collection because he needs 67 new licenses each year. He contacts dealers and goes to trade shows to complete each year and to trade and sell for lower numbers. He also collects Pennsylvania special issue, non-resident, visitor, complimentary, and experimental licenses, those made just before the change to another type of material such as aluminum, tin, and paper.

"Very little is known about the complimentary fishing licenses. If a fishing warden had a friend out of state or an official who wanted to fish, they'd give them one of these. There's no number higher than 50 and only eight different years are known 1936, "37, '38, '39, '41, '42, '45, and '46. We've never seen any for 1940, "42, or '44."

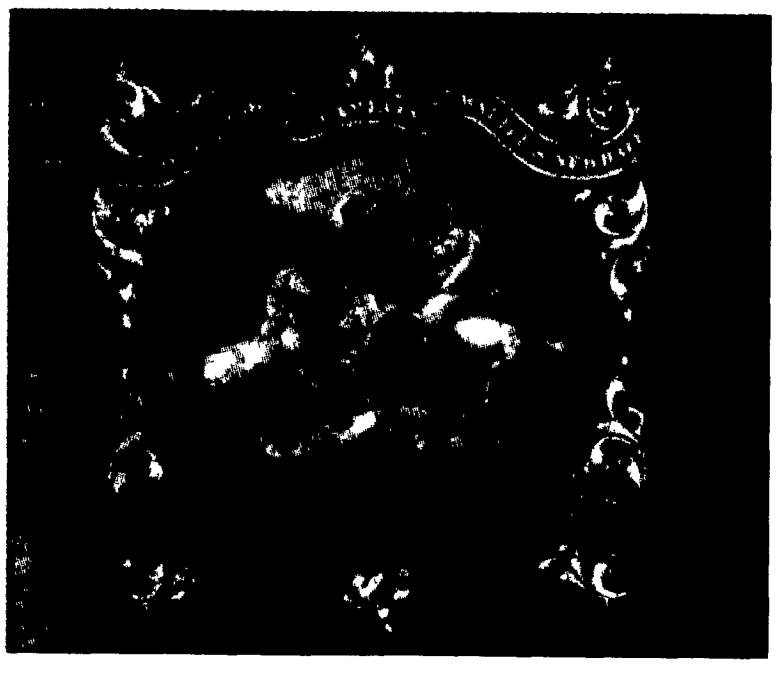
Because collecting hunting and fishing licenses is an ongoing process, Forrest keeps a keen hunter's eye out for the licenses he needs to complete his collections including his extensive collection of out-of-state fishing buttons, many from Hawaii, but that's another story.



Cloth hunting licenses were issued from 1913 through 1923. These are part of Forrest Kauffman's complete set.



Forrest Kauffman has collected several #44 hunting licenses issued in Mifflin County.



Regimental flags of the Civil War rarely appear for sale. This one has been preserved by members of the Newhall family for more than 135 years and will be auctioned March 8. See story at right.

Civil War Flag Featured In Cataloged Auction

HATFIELD (Montgomery Co.) — In the final days of the American Civil War, at the surrender of Robert E. Lee and his Confederate Army, the spring breezes of Virginia gently lifted the silk folds of the regimental battleflags of the third Pennsylvania Cavalry.

One flag was special to the unit and represented one of their tragic losses. This special flag had been carried side by side with the rest of the regimental flags since December 1863 and bears the words "In Memory of Capt. Walter S. Newhall — To The Third PA Cavalry — Dec. 1863."

Sixteen months prior to Appomatox, on Dec. 18, 1863, Captain Walter Symonds Newhall was traveling on horseback to join his brother, Captain Frederick C. Newhall. On this cold December day tragedy struck Walter far from the battlefield. In Virginia, while crossing a stream that flowed into the Rappahannock River, Newhall's horse lost it's footing and fell into the frigid water. Walter was pinned under the horse and unable to extricate himself, he eventually drowned.

In Dec. 1863, the third Pennsylvania Cavalry was to be given a presentation flag from the grateful citizens of Philadelphia. Because of

Best Repro Buys Can Be French Furniture

It can be plain or fancy, but if it's French furniture it is practically guaranteed to sell well. If you like the look, then check out the quality reproductions of period pieces that constantly come to auction. The pieces in Louis XIV, XV and XVI style reproduced in the late 19th century are usually well made down to the last inch of mixed wood marquetry inlays and ersatz gilt-bronze.

Even when they sell over auction estimate they can still be big bargains. Recently, a Louis XV/XVI style tulipwood parquetry and marble-top Semainiere (seven-drawer chest), late 19th century was offered at $600-800. It sold for $1,380. Where could you find a brand new similar piece these days for that price?

Reproductions of the glitz and gilt Louis pieces always sell, even though the ormolu isn't gilt bronze but gilted white metal. They are still being turned out in Holland among other places. Prices are always higher for them. Part of the fascination is that ormolu tables and commodes create an image of wealth and royalty. When seen by the average non-collector, it is assumed they're straight from the Kings' palace.

Among the first reproductions of 18th century French furniture were the pieces made in Russia around 1800. They were often made by the serfs for the nobility, or by imported French cabinet makers.

In the late 19th century, interest in 18th century French furniture was revived as Victorian rococo, along with reproductions following the styles of the 18th century master craftsmen (ebenistes).

Clues: Reproductions are a slightly different scale than the period pieces. Problems come when you pay for too much for a reproduction. Many buyers never know they've been had until they go to sell the piece or insure it. Buying at quality auction houses is often safer than buying from a dealer at a fancy antique show who doesn't offer a money-back guarantee or papers of provenance.

In the 18th century, members of the Parisian guilds had to sign their names or stamp them on pieces made between 1743 and 1790; often adding the mark of their business. By the turn-of-the-century many fakers put either phony signatures or the names of craftsmen who didn't work in the period the piece was supposedly made. If you are going to spend big money on a supposedly authentic period piece, check through lists of 18th century French craftsmen in your library. When it comes to buying an upholstered piece, have the fabric stripped in a corner to check the construction...that's what a dealer would do.

French Furniture

For a brief period, after the death of Louis XIV, Philippe, Duke of Orleans reigned as regent. During his brief rule, a new style evolved replacing baroque. The gilt mounts used shell and floral motifs, and delicate asymmetrical scrolls. Known as "Regence" it was popular until the middle of the eighteenth century, when it became even more elegant and flamboyant rococo. It was during this period that the cabriole leg was introduced.

Some of the best buys in reproduction Regence are seat furniture with cane seats and backs.

The Directorie French period of the Revolution (1799-1804) often featured slim, straight legs in the Greco-Roman style with stylized motifs. Many pieces with new uses were created at this time. Among them the semainiere with a drawer for a change of clothing everyday of the week and small cabinets mounted on straight thin legs. Mahogany was the popular wood. Rosewood, tulipwood and fruitwoods were combined in geometric marquetry or parquetry. There is a delicacy lacking in other styles of French furniture.

Civil War Flag

Walter S. Newhall's tragic death the upper presentation banner on the flag was changed to reflect the loss and express the grief of both the regiment and the citizens of Philadelphia. In late December 1863, Clement S. Barclay, a prominent Philadelphian, presented the Newhall Memorial Flag to the regiment at their camp near Warrenton, Virginia. For the remainder of the Civil War, this flag took it's honored place beside the unit's other flags at the head of the regiment. The Newhall flag accompanied the regiment in camp and on the battlefield until July 21, 1865 when the regiment was disbanded upon completion of military service. At this time the officers of the regiment voted unanimously to present the flag to Walter's mother, Mrs. Thomas A. Newhall, then living in Germantown, Pa. At the end of the war, the third Pennsylvania Cavalry had participated in more than 40 major engagements and had lost over 170 men.

On March 8, the Alderfer Auction Company in Hatfield, Pa. will be honored to offer for auction the Walter S. Newhall Memorial Flag at it's quarterly fine arts catalog auction. The flag, measuring 54 x 60 inches, is a true piece of American history and has been preserved and protected by members of the Newhall family for over 135 years since its presentation to the family in 1865. Regimental flags and standards of the American Civil War rarely appear for sale, particularly one with such importance and provenance. For further information, see alderferauction.com.

A True Cattleman's Workhorse. In Stock Now!

The New John Deere 7000 TEN Series Tractors

We know how important a good, reliable chore tractor is for day to day livestock operations. That's why we're building new 95-hp 7210, 105-hp 7410, and 115-hp 7510 Tractors equipped specifically for you. Each tractor is outfitted with a 740 self-leveling loader, ComfortGard® cab, tight-turning MFWD, 16-speed PowrQuad™ transmission with left-hand reverser, high-capacity hydraulic pump with 26 gpm flow, and more. Everything you need to make you a more productive operator.

But best of all, we're building a special reserve of these rugged mid-size workhorses so when you need to replace your older chore tractor, there's no more waiting in line. These popular tractors are now in stock and available for immediate sale and distribution.

We know that there's always one tractor on the place that seems to do all the work: cleaning, loading, blading, grinding, mixing, cutting, baling, pulling, you-name-it, it does it. So we designed these rugged machines with the power, dependability, adaptability, and maneuverability to match those tasks and more. Plus, they're very competitively priced. You get upfront value now, with traditional John Deere high-resale value at trade-in time. A true cattleman's workhorse. Check them out. See your John Deere dealer and ask about these specially-equipped tractors built just for you.

NRC Will Reflect Current Knowledge About Phosphorus Nutrition

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) — New knowledge has been developed in the last 10 years in the phosphorus (P) requirement of lactating dairy cows, and the new release of the "Nutrient Requirement of Dairy Cattle" by the National Research Council (NRC) will reflect this.

The maintenance requirement of P has been demonstrated to be better expressed as a function of dry matter intake than as a function of body weight. The switch is a result of the understanding that fecal P consists of microbial residue P, metabolic P, unavailable P, and regulated P fractions. Microbial residue P, metabolic P, plus negligible urinary P, constitute the maintenance requirement. This amount is directly related to feed intake, reflecting its effect on salivary P and microbial production. This categorization implies that P is excreted in feces in a regulated manner. If the animal is deficient in P, there will be little P excreted. If intake P is more than required, the surplus P will be excreted in the regulated fraction. This explains why fecal P concentration increases as more P is fed.

The P content of milk is relatively constant (about 0.09 percent), although it appears to have a weak correlation with milk protein content. Its relationship with milk fat is even weaker. No change in P requirement for lactation is expected to occur in the new NRC.

The 1989 NRC uses 50 percent as the availability value of P from the gut for all sources of P when calculating the amount of P to be fed to meet the requirement. The value reflects a 10 percent reduction from the 1978 edition. The reduction seems to be a step backward. An availability value should reflect true digestibility that is determined at a P intake just to meet the requirement. Several studies have suggested that the value should be close to 70 percent for forages. Monosodium phosphate and dicalcium phosphate should have even higher values. The use of a higher availability value reduces the allowances of P.

While the 1989 NRC recommends reasonable P requirements for the most part, partially because it uses an unrealistically low value for the maintenance requirement despite the use of a low feed P availability value, the new NRC is expected to have overall recommendations. This is largely due to increased P availability values. The special high dietary P amount (0.48 percent) recommended by the 1989 NRC for early lactation cows is expected to be removed, as P mobilization from bone in this stage of lactation should be credited as a P source for milk production. Mobilized P should be re-stored in late lactation. Many dairy producers feed their cows more P than recommended even by the current NRC, which some have adopted recent research results and reduced their dietary P amount. These results showed that 0.38 percent P is sufficient for high producing cows (greater than 20,000 pounds). Cows fed this level of P for three years showed normal bone strength and P content. There is no evidence that feeding more P than recommended by NRC improves reproductive performance. Following new NRC recommendations of P will minimize manure P and reduce feed costs.

2001 Seedling Sale

DAUPHIN (Dauphin Co.) — The Dauphin County Conservation District is conducting its annual Spring Seedling Sale to promote the importance of forest resources and to encourage area residents to actively celebrate Arbor Day by planting a tree.

This year the district is offering eight varieties of bareroot seedlings. The evergreen varieties are 3- and 4-years-old, 7- to 20-inches in height, are packaged in bundles of ten of the same species and sell for $6 a bundle. Selection includes Douglas Fir, White Pine, Concolor Fir, Canadian Hemlock and Norway Spruce.

Hardwoods available this year are White flowering Dogwood, Red Oak, Eastern Red Bud, White Ash and Winterberry. The hardwoods are between 8- to 24-inches in height, depending on variety, and will sell for $1 each.

Large quantity orders may also be purchased at special bulk rates, but are packaged in bundles of 25.

The district will again offer Wildflower Seeds. There will be Sunny, Shady and Bird and Butterfly mixes and they will be sold in $9 and $10.50 containers. Once again we will be offering tree shelters and black-eyed Susans.

New this year in cooperation with the Dauphin County Cooperative Extension, we will have available to order strawberry plants in seven varieties packaged in bundles of 25 plants, blueberries in three varieties, thornless blackberries, black raspberries, red raspberries and asparagus.

In pursuit of the conservation of our natural resources, we are often charged to "think globally and act locally." Probably no single action better exemplifies that statement than the planting of a tree. Trees beautify our immediate surroundings and provide shelter to wildlife, as well as shade to make our homes and offices more energy efficient.

They reduce noise and provide wind barriers. They cool the air through the evaporation of large quantities of water they transpire. By inhibiting soil erosion, they ultimately provide cleaner streams, rivers and estuaries, and most important they release precious oxygen into the atmosphere that is vital to the protection of earth and all its inhabitants.

We all know of the economic value of trees. They supply us with hundreds of products we cannot live without, so it is essential that we keep renewing this valuable resource. You can ultimately serve the globe by planting trees locally.

This is the 27th consecutive year the district has sold seedlings. To obtain information or an order form, call the district office at (717) 921-8298. Orders must be prepaid and received at the district office by March 30. Seedlings should be picked up at the Agriculture and Natural Resources Center, 1451 Peters Mountain Road (Route 225) in Dauphin. Dates and times will be announced with order reminders in April. Orders not picked up during scheduled pick up times will be charged a $5 late pick up fee, unless prior arrangements have been made with the conservation district.

Producers Discuss Alternative Ways Of Dairying At Dairy Day

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Lancaster County Dairy Day will be held 9:30 a.m. on Tues., March 6 at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center.

It is an opportunity for dairy producers to hear about the experiences of other producers as they discuss the changes they have made in their dairy operations and their reasons for making the changes.

As dairy producers look to the future, many of them are analyzing their own businesses and asking "What changes do I need to make in order to take advantage of more favorable cattle and milk prices, to maintain a competitive edge in the industry, and to support a favorable lifestyle?"

Should I expand? If so, how and to what degree? Should I become more specialized and concentrate primarily on milking cows and let someone else work the land, harvest the crops, raise the heifers, etc.? Should I cash in on strong cattle prices, sell the herd, rent out the barn, get another job, farm the land, and sell the crops to the tenant farmer? Or should I sell the milking herd and keep the heifers so I can start milking again after a short rest and after milk prices have a chance to recover?

Are there ways we can team up with other producers (local dairy farmers, and local or distant crop growers) and dairy industry people to develop working alliances that will be mutually beneficial?

Hoober Has Your Tractor

The 624 Most Reliable Horses at Philadelphia Park

When it comes to horses you can count on at Philadelphia Park, the horses found in the six Case-IH Magnum and Maxxum tractors are certainly the most reliable ones That's because Philadelphia Park relies on Case-IH Magnum and Maxxum tractors from Hoober, Inc to help keep the track in perfect shape

"We run our tractors 24 hours a day, seven days a week from Thanksgiving until mid to late-March," says Philadelphia Park Track Superintendent Roy Smith "We've been with Hoober since around 1989 and we've been real happy with them "

Just how reliable have Case-IH tractors from Hoober been for Philadelphia Park? One of the track's two 7110 Magnums has logged 20,700 hours with no major problems, while the other Magnum is still going strong after 18,000 hours of service

"The power's way up there and the Cummins turbo diesel engines in those tractors are excellent," says Tom Dasher Philadelphia Park's head mechanic "They're really heavy-duty and they really hold up The transmissions are heavy-duty, too We couldn't ask for more "

For Philadelphia Park, there's something just as important as the reliability of the Case-IH Magnums and Maxxums, and that's service after the sale "Their response time is excellent and it's because of their service we've been with them so long They make an effort to please the customer they really do," says Dasher

If you need a tractor, visit Hoober, Inc to put the power, performance and reliability of a Case-IH Magnum or Maxxum tractor to work for you

Attention:

Kinze/John Deere Planter & No-Till Drill Owners

Did you know that those old cast iron closing wheels can be reconditioned to "like-new" performance for a fraction of replacement cost?

Now is the time to get ready for tough planting conditions like sod and dry, hard soil. We can help your older planter or drill to close those seed trenches properly. (See illustration)

Benefits include:
- ✔ Less closing pressure
- ✔ More uniform germination
- ✔ Improved stand population
- ✔ Increased yields

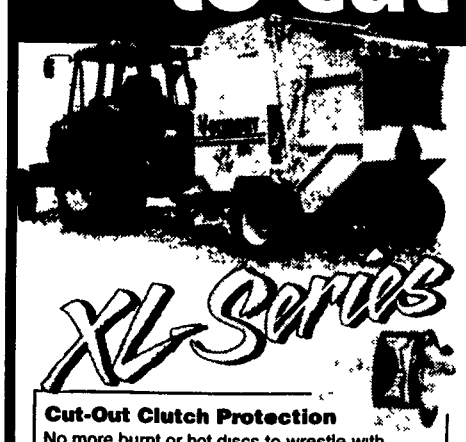
NEW! Vermeer 554XL Baler:

This is the baler that loves to eat hay!



XL Series

Here's why:

- 5-bar pickup handles bigger windrows, faster speeds.
- Simple, horizontal bale-starting system is designed for fast starts
- Bottom drum design lets you pull in hay faster; often allowing you to drive a full gear faster
- Best HaySaver Wheels in the field.
- Up to 1200 lbs. in a single 65" dia. x 48" wide package; 2000 lb. capacity with silage baler option.
- Silage option lets you bale wet or dry without changing a thing.
- Makes bales 17% larger* than a standard 5' dia. x 4' wide baler at virtually the same price! ****

Cut-Out Clutch Protection
No more burnt or hot discs to wrestle with. Great protection . . for those times when your baler's pulling harder on the outside rows, the tractor's overpowered, or you accidently overfill when trying to bale that last strip of hay

* determined by comparing volume measurement of a standard 60" dia. x 48" wide bale versus a 65 dia. x 48" wide Vermeer bale

 Price comparison is based on published list prices (Y2000) between Vermeer 554XL Series Baler and other 5 x 4 competitive round baler models

Case IH Sprayers Offer Key Improvements

BENSON, Minn. — Two models of Case IH self-propelled sprayers have been enhanced for improved performance and efficiency.

A streamlined radiator and a three-inch plumbing system are the most significant changes on the Case IH SPX 3200 sprayer for 2001.

The new radiator has been redesigned to improve visibility. "The repackaged radiator really improves the operator's sightlines on the right side of the cab," said Steve Willey, Case IH product manager for sprayers. "Another great addition is the three-inch fill line plumbing, which shortens tendering time."

The liquid system includes flanged fittings in all the three-inch-diameter hoses, which replace the previous threaded hose fittings. This allows the operator to better service the liquid plumbing system and reduces the potential for leaks. Replacement parts are easily removed and replaced with simple clamps rather than time-consuming threaded connections.

The three-inch plumbing system is available now on the SPX 3200's optional stainless steel tanks, and will be available this summer on poly tanks. A new 800-gallon poly tank replaces the previous 750-gallon tank, for greater capacity.

Added enhancements to the SPX 3200 sprayer include:

- A saddle-mounted rinse tank (available with stainless steel option only) for better visibility.
- Dynamic load sense steering that draws hydraulic flow only upon demand, resulting in greater power efficiency and easier steering.
- Backup alarm for safety.

The Case IH SPX 2130 sprayer also offers a number of advancements for 2001, and several components have been strengthened for longer-lasting performance.

Improvement include:

- A new fiberglass nose with an improved lighting package.
- A 71-gallon fuel tank, nine percent larger than previous tank.
- A reinforced frame and heavier springs for increased durability.
- A new 80-foot boom that features an independent outer boom and increased structural strength.
- Wheel track width adjustable from 72 to 102-inches, allowing more versatility for use in crops with different row widths.

Pioneer Hi-Bred International Unveils New Corn Hybrids

DES MOINES, Iowa — Growers can expect to find a variety of choices in products designed to deliver value to their individual operations in the new corn hybrids Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc. is introducing for the 2001 growing season.

"The highest priority of our corn breeding program has always been to provide our customers with a broad selection of products that yield top performance across a range of conditions and over a variety of locations and production systems," said Bob Heimbaugh, Pioneer product line management director.

The results of this focus are clearly evident in the 2000 National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) Yield Contest, where Pioneer brand hybrids earned first-place honors in all nine categories and accounted for 25 of 27 national place-winners. The genetics that yielded these exceptional results also reserve as the foundation for the new hybrids for 2001.

"The new introductions show our company's continued commitment to providing growers with hybrids that have superior, high-yielding genetics and field-proven plant health and agronomic packages," Heimbaugh said. "Our new corn offerings also provide more choices than ever in critical areas of weed and insect control."

Included in the new introductions for 2001 are nine new Elite conventional corn hybrids, 10 hybrids with the YieldGard gene, one hybrid with the LibertyLink gene, and three hybrids with the YieldGard gene and the Clearfield Production System.

The new class of 2001 hybrids — and the entire Pioneer corn line — does not contain hybrids with a combination of the YieldGard and LibertyLink genes. Grain from these hybrids is not yet approved for import into the European Union. Pioneer has decided to postpone sales of these hybrids for the 2001 growing season to minimize possible confusion among customers.

Finding the right mix of Pioneer brand corn hybrids — among both new and existing products — that offer the greatest overall return on investment per acre is as simple as contacting your local Pioneer sales professional.

Roto-Mix Introduces Self-Propelled, Self-Loading Mixer

DODGE CITY, Kan. — Roto-Mix has introduced the revolutionary Model 620-16 self-propelled, self-loading total mixed rations (TMR) feed mixer.

This mixer technology takes the TMR feeding process to a new level of speed and convenience.

The 620-16 offers fast and accurate loading of all types of commodities. Loading starts with an integrated rotary cutter head, which cleanly removes the corn or hay silage directly from the feed bunker. The loading arm will reach to bunker heights of more than 17-feet.

The resulting clean-shaven and well-compacted bunk face minimizes feed spoilage by reducing the infiltration of air and water. The flighting of the cutter head conveys grain, dry hay, and other commodities onto the high-capacity loading belt.

Once the desired amount of a single ration ingredient is added to the mixer, the loading belt is stopped and then reversed to remove excess material on the belt. Operator can then continue to add additional ingredients until ration is complete.

Loading, mixing, and delivery is easily monitored from the climate-controlled comfort of the cab during the entire feeding process. From the cab control center, the operator loads ingredients and delivers the TMR ration to the animals, saving valuable time and money.

This self-propelled mixer is powered by a 185-horsepower turbo diesel engine hydrostatic wheel drive pump for variable speed control. The proven hydrostatic operation allows for ease of maneuverability and smooth control of travel speed. Feeding time and costs are reduced by the easy maneuverability of the unit and by the time-saving, single-unit process.

The 620-16 offers fast and accurate loading of all types of commodities.

The Roto-Mix commercial series Model 620-16 feed mixer chamber has a 620 cubic foot mixing capacity. It can mix up to a maximum ration weight of its 17,500 pounds for heavy rations and 12,000 pounds for hay rations. You can choose a 3-, 5-, or 6-bar high-strength rotor to match your ration for gentle, yet fast and complete mixing. The 620 series commercial mixers are also available for trailer, stationary, and truck applications.

Animal Disease Research Sets International Standards Of Control

WOOSTER, Ohio — Ohio State University research on two animal diseases that can cause severe economic losses in the swine and poultry industries if not detected early is getting international recognition.

Two research labs, headed by Linda Saif and Mo Saif within the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center, are the only two centers in the world where developments in transmissible gastroenteritis and infectious bursal disease, respectively, set the standards for testing, detecting, and controlling for those diseases.

The "reference" labs are part of the Office International Des Epizooties (OIE), an international organization comprised of 155 member countries whose purpose is to report the existence of animal diseases, coordinate research on surveillance and control, and examine regulations on international trade in animals and animal products. OIE keeps track of more than 50 diseases that affect the animal industry and have the potential to spread to humans. Such diseases include bovine spongiform encephalopathy (mad cow disease), scrapie, Rift Valley fever, bovine tuberculosis, salmonellosis, trichinellosis, rabies and Bluetongue.

Mo Saif, head of OARDC's Food Animal Health Research Program (FAHRP) whose research includes infectious bursal disease, said the role of the "reference" labs is to collaborate with OIE members to provide existing information and reagents on a particular disease and give recommendations on effective means of control.

"On occasion, lab experts are invited to review regulations and make recommendations for any necessary changes," he said. "The recommendations are based on available knowledge of the disease. Such collaboration also opens the door for future research to fill knowledge gaps in a particular area."

Mo Saif recently met with OIE experts in Paris to address concerns from Australian and New Zealand industry professionals over the possibility of the presence of infectious bursal disease virus in imported chicken meat. Issues of viral persistence in the meat and the effectiveness of vaccinations were discussed and recommendations were made on new regulations for import and export. In addition, research needs and priorities were established.

Infectious bursal disease or Gumboro disease is caused by infectious bursal disease virus, which alters the immune system in young chickens three to six weeks old, making them susceptible to other infections and diseases. Infectious bursal disease is highly contagious — if one chick is infected, there is nearly a 100 percent chance an entire flock has the disease. There is no known cure and the only method of control is vaccination.

Transmissible gastroenteritis, studied by OARDC researcher Linda Saif, is an enteric disease of pigs caused by the virus of the same name. Marked by diarrhea and vomiting, the disease is most common in baby pigs. One hundred percent of infected newborns may die. The method for controlling the virus is through vaccinations.

OARDC researchers have developed a RT-PCR test for use directly on field specimens for detecting transmissible gastroenteritis virus (TGEV) that distinguishes it from its less-damaging variant, porcine respiratory coronavirus. This test is very useful for export-import purposes to markets where animals free of TGEV are required.

U.S. houses 30 of the 160 worldwide research labs that focus on different animal diseases. The labs at FAHRP are the only two OIE member facilities located at The Ohio State University.

For more information on the organization and animal diseases, log on to www.oie.int.

LCCD To Give Ann Brown Memorial Scholarship

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Lancaster County Conservative District (LCCD) will accept scholarship applications from graduating seniors who will be continuing their education with the intent of majoring in a curriculum which focuses on natural resources and/or conservation.

Some examples of acceptable programs of studies would be environmental sciences, wildlife and/or fisheries biology; environmental resource management, or other related programs leading to an advanced degree (two-year Associate Degree or four-year Baccalaureate Degree) will be considered.

The scholarship will provide two $1,000 scholarships for enrollment in a post-high school institution during 2001/2002. Successful candidates will be eligible for a follow-up sophomore year scholarship of $400.

The completed application must be received in the LCCD office by April 12. The scholarship committee of LCCD will conduct a review of the applicants. Basis for the selection will be determined on past performance and activities, current school and community involvement, future purpose, and direction plus the applicant's ability to communicate.

The scholarship committee, prior to the final selection, will interview the top five candidates. An announcement of the successful candidates will be made on May 15.

Maryland DHIA Report For January

The January Dairy Herd Improvement information for dairy herds from the DHI processing center in Provo, Utah. The list includes herds from Maryland, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia. The information is listed by herd name, county association, number of cows in the herd and the average production per cow in the herd based on Energy Corrected Milk (ECM). ECM combines milk production and components.

The ECM formula is: (7.2 x lbs. protein) + (12.95 x lbs. fat) + (.327 x lbs. milk). To be included, the herd must have 10 cows averaging 65 pounds or more of ECM per cow, per day. All herds reported are on official DHI or DHIR test. Also listed are the top 10 herds in Maryland for the Brown Swiss, Guernseys, and Jerseys, and the top seven herds for Ayrshires.

Program Will Introduce Farmers To Processing Of Speciality Dairy Products

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — With their dense, diverse, and wealthy populations, Maryland and surrounding states offer an excellent market for a wide variety of premium dairy products. Few of these products, however, are made in the Mid-Atlantic region.

Dr. Scott Rankin, extension dairy processing specialist with the University of Maryland College of Agriculture and Natural Resources, hopes to change that situation. To that end, he has organized the second annual Farmstead Milk Processing technical program for cow, goat, and sheep milk producers interested in manufacturing legal, high-quality dairy foods on the farm.

The program, sponsored by Maryland Cooperative Extension, will be March 24 at the Dutch's Daughter Conference Center in Frederick, Md.

"The manufacture of a variety of dairy foods, such as premium ice creams and speciality cheeses, can be an attractive alternative income opportunity for milk producers," said Rankin. "However, the success of such an enterprise depends on several critical items, including regulatory compliance, marketing, and appropriate processing technologies. Our goal is to introduce program participants to both the opportunities and challenges of farmstead milk processing by providing a realistic and practical overview of the subject."

Participants will discover what products are in demand, how cheeses are bought and sold, and what technical training is available in the U.S. They will hear about equipment options, potential co-marketing opportunities, and the personal experiences of owners of successful small-scale operations.

A highlight for many will be a presentation on the diverse world of premium cheeses by Jim Path, who oversees the speciality cheese and Wisconsin Master Cheesemaker programs at the University of Wisconsin. A recognized expert in the world of speciality cheese manufacture, Path was inducted last year into France's Commanderie de Fromages Society, which honors individuals that excel in promoting speciality cheeses. He is one of only five Americans — and the only one from academia — inducted into the society in the last 30 years.

Advance registration is required. The fee for registrations postmarked by March 16 is $35; after that, the price increases to $45. Payment covers tuition, course materials, continental breakfast, break refreshments, hot buffet lunch, and wine-and-cheese tasting.

For more information, contact Dr. Scott Rankin at (301) 405-4568 or rankins@wam.umd.edu. Or check out the program website at http://ansc.umd.edu-/dairyfoods/index.html.

No-Till Conference At Md. And Pa. Locations

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — An international flavor has been added to the 27th annual Mid-Atlantic No-Till Conference, being held at three locations on consecutive days in early March.

Dates and sites for the conference are as follows:

March 7 — Hotel Magee in downtown Bloomsburg, Pa.;

March 8 — Penn Dell Conference Center, north of Carlisle on Highway 74;

March 9 — Delaware State Fairground, south of Harrington, Del., along U.S. Highway 13. Program sessions at each site will run from 9 a.m. to 3:45 p.m.

Lead-off speaker for this year's event will be Carlos Crovetto Lamarca, a world-famous no-till farmer-author from Chile.

He will be followed on the morning program at all three conference sites by Donald C. Reicosky of Morris, Minn., an internationally recognized specialist on soil quality and environmental concerns. Dr. Reicosky is a soil scientist at the North Central Soil Conservation Research Laboratory of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Research Service (ARS).

Both he and Senor Lamarca have extensive experience working under cropping conditions similar to those found here in the Northeast. Reicosky and Lamarca also will lead concurrent 45-minute breakout sessions throughout the afternoon in their specialty areas.

Two other breakout sessions will deal with weed control and cover crops under no-till conditions. William S. Curran and Sjoerd Duiker, both Penn State agronomists, will lead the weed control and cover crops breakout sessions, respectively, at both Pennsylvania locations, with assistance from farmer panelists.

Mark VanGessel, an extension weed specialist at the University of Delaware, and Steve Groff of Holtwood, a well-known Lancaster County no-till vegetable producer, will be the panel leaders at Harrington, Del.

Continuing education credits for Certified Crop Advisors may be earned at any of the three conference sites.

The conference is sponsored by cooperative extension at land-grant universities and by the USDA's Natural Resources Conservation Service in participating Mid-Atlantic states, with assistance from the Pocono Northeast and Capital Region Resource Conservation and Development Areas, and interested agribusiness organizations.

A $20 registration fee for the conference includes lunch and printed materials if paid before February 26. After that, the fee is $25 per person. Registration contact persons include:

EPA Approves New Wheat, Barley Seed Protectant

DALLAS, Texas — Wheat and barley producers who often lose yields to outbreaks of common root rot, dry seed decay, barley stripe, smut, and seedborne scab have a new tool for protecting their crops in 2001.

The EPA has approved Raxil® MD Extra fungicide from Gustafson LLC as a seed protectant for wheat and barley.

"Raxil MD Extra is the most comprehensive small grains seed protectant available to wheat and barley producers in the northern Plains and other areas where common root rot and other early season diseases pose a serious economic threat," said Glen Karaffa, small grains product manager at Gustafson. "The package of three systemic active ingredients, an innovative formulation technology, and a very low-use rate combine to make Raxil MD Extra a truly premier seed-applied fungicide product for broad-spectrum disease control."

Raxil MD Extra is recommended especially for protection of seed planted in ground devoted to continuous small grains plantings or that previously was affected by common root rot, said Karaffa. It also should be the preferred protection choice when planting into warmer soils or when limited soil moisture can delay emergence. Karaffa noted these conditions often lead to higher disease pressure and a need for greater protection.

Raxil MD Extra is the first and only seed-applied fungicide for wheat and barley to contain three systemic active ingredients. It combines tebuconazole and metalaxyl — the active ingredients in the company's original Raxil MD formulation — with imazalil. Tebuconazole provides systemic protection against many of the most common cereal grain diseases, while metalaxyl is the industry standard for systemic protection against Pythium. Imazalil provides powerful added protection against a variety of soil- and seedborne diseases, including common root rot, dry seed decay, barley stripe, and seedborne scab.

Having Problems Getting Milk Cold?

Consider a Mueller pre-cooler. It's an excellent way to lower the cost of cooling milk. It reduces milk temperature with water pumped straight out of your well. Mueller® precoolers are available in sizes to work with any system. If lower electric bills would make your life easier, call us and ask for more information on Mueller precoolers.

BEEF TIPS

Simmental Donor Cows

In December, a 3-year-old donor cow named Josie from Gramm Farms in Minnesota sold for $30,000 to Lucas Cattle Company of Indiana and Missouri. The progeny from this previously unknown cow's first flush brought over $50,000 to the owner. A bull calf and a heifer calf (part of that first flush) from this cow came to McClure Mills Farms, Shirleysburg, Pennsylvania. Pennsylvania and Maryland breeders are known for acquiring the best Simmental genetics available in the country.

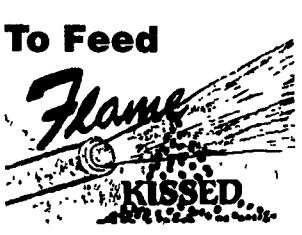
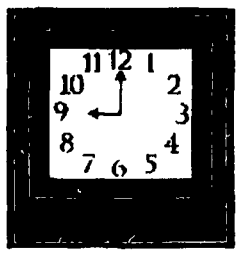
THE TIME IS RIGHT!

To Feed





ROASTED GRAIN

Its time to lower those feed prices.
With extremely low grain prices and the modest price for roasting, your grain can be turned into a valuable feed commodity.

Its time to trim away those extra cost factors.
Custom roasting on your farm. . gives you the ability to feed your own grain, not someone else's.... eliminates trucking expenses. no mill charges, shrinkage, storage and handling.

Its time to value feeding grains that have been purged.
Only flame roasting can effectively remove molds and reduce toxins to tolerant levels Better herd health will... reduce veterinary and breeding bills... enhance production of milk... increase weight gains in beef and swine.

Want Milk?

Four Ways We Deliver More...

#1 More By-pass, More Milk – Weaver's Toasted Beans offer consistently higher by-pass protein cows need to make more milk.

#2 More Production per Protein Unit – Toasting provides consistently superior protein release from every bean, without variations that can tie up amino acids

#3 More Rumen-Friendly Source – Toasting is gentle. Digestibility is improved. Energy (oil) is retained inside the bean to minimize impact on the rumen.

Now you can get more energy, improved palatability, and better digestibility from corn...

WEAVER'S TOASTED FLAKED CORN

High density energy value for the dairy ration

- Time-tested, controlled hot air process maximizes quality & bin life.

Forward Pricing Critical To Corn Growers' Economic Survival

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

HOLTWOOD (Lancaster Co.) — "You can no longer put corn in a bin and wait on prices," said Ann Risser, Risser Grain.

Risser, who with her family are celebrating 25 years in the grain elevator business, are trying to spread the word about the realities of grain buying and selling.

Farmers need to "have a marketing plan," Risser said, including simple forward pricing.

Ann, with husband Mark and son Brent and Brent's wife, Debbie, operate a grain business with three locations, serving about 2,500 customers.

With headquarters in Holtwood, the grain business picks up and delivers grain to areas in Lancaster, York, and other southeast Pennsylvania counties, all of Maryland, and into New York.

At Holtwood, all 150 tillable acres are rented.

Late last year, the location housed two piles of grain overflow. Both covered, one pile included 200,000 bushels or 11 million pounds of corn.

Another, when it was piled, included about 50,000 bushels. The corn is on top of a 120-foot square concrete pad and covered by a heavy plastic bunker cover.

Storage at the Holtwood location, noted Brent Risser, is more than 550,000 bushels. They can store 250,000 bush-

Crop Winners Announced At Keystone Farm Show

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

YORK (York Co.) — Winners of the Pennsylvania Five-Acre Corn Club Contest were announced here at the York Fairgrounds in mid-January during the annual Keystone Farm Show.

Dan Wolf, president of the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association (PMCGA), noted that of the 103 entries in the corn contest, there were some "notable differences," he said, in cultural practices compared to the 1999 contest. Only 7 of 91 growers used cultivation, with most growers using 30-inch row spacing. The second highest spacing was 38 inches apart.

Wolf noted it is "hard to find significant differences in yield to favor one type of tillage over another," he told those attending the awards presentation at the fairgrounds.

About 44 percent of the contestants use sidedress nitrogen. Average planting depth was 1.7 inches. Corn acres grown by participants numbered 24,242.

For the most part, the year was substantially different in terms of total yield, a vast improvement from the statewide drought of the previous summer. "Some don't appreciate how good of a year it was," Wolf said.

Greg Roth, Penn State

CORN TALK NEWS
PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOC., INC.

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Consider joining NCGA and PMCGA today to be part of a national effort to promote corn and corn producer-related issues.

With our Membership Incentive Program (MIP), corn producers who grow five or more acres of corn can join both organizations with little real cost.

The MIP program works like this:

If you sign up for a three-year joint membership for $75, you can receive a free bag of seed from one of our participating industry partners listed on the form. To get signed up, complete your membership form and send it in to our office at the address listed on the form along with a check for $75 made payable to PMCGA to cover the three-year membership.

Our office will then send your name to the seed company you have selected and a coupon to you indicating you have qualified for the program. You will then be contacted by one of the seed company reps and your seed will be delivered before the planting season.

This is a win-win-win proposition — you get a bag of seed and membership in a large national organization for $75, NCGA and PMCGA get your support, and the seed industry gets to showcase new genetics to key producers.

As a member of NCGA, you will be part of a 30,000-member national organization that is addressing many of the issues we face in the industry. Issues include corn prices, industry consolidation, environmental issues, and development of new markets for corn.

NCGA also sponsors the National Corn Yield Contest and Commodity Classic. They also send a quarterly newsletter to all members, entitled the National Corn Grower. PMCGA sponsors one or two conferences a year, the Five-Acre Corn Club, Corn Talk, and helps to promote corn issues to the public at many local events.

If you are a corn producer who grows at least five acres of corn, consider joining for three years today and taking advantage of the MIP program. Use the MIP program to look at some new hybrids that some of our seed company partners have available this year. Remember, membership in the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association (PMCGA) automatically makes you a member in the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA).

Crop Winners Announced

corn specialist, noted on the summary that the "2000 season was a welcome improvement over 1999 for many producers," he wrote. "Top yields like this don't happen just by chance. They are the result of careful planning and top-notch management throughout the season."

Even with generally good weather, there were some stress factors that affected yields. Cool weather limited grain fill in some cases. In others, stalk lodging was severe. A dry August for some put a "ceiling on yield performance," Roth wrote.

Following is a list of the corn grower winners announced at the Keystone Farm Show:

2000 Champions, 1998-2000 three-year Average Awards, ear corn class:

• First place, Kenneth L. Glazier, McConnelsburg, with an average yield of 204.2 bushels per acre using Hubner H3505.

• Second place, David Schantz, Alburtis, with an average yield of 174.7 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3194, Pioneer 33Y09, and Pioneer 33A14.

Corn Growers Insist On Verified Hybrids Before Planting

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) is urging farmers to insist that seed companies verify that the hybrids being sold have been tested for the presence of Cry9C, the StarLink Bt.

"It isn't a typical question growers ask when buying seed, but it's an extremely important one this season. USDA has said that no Cry9C corn would be sold or grown in 2001," said Fred Yoder. The Plain City, Ohio, farmer is chairman of the NCGA Corn Board's Biotechnology Working Group. "The message is simple: Verify before you buy.

"This information will be readily available from seed companies. In late December, USDA recommended that seed companies sample and test all hybrid seed lots and all seed parent lines for the presence of Cry9C. Any seed testing positive for Cry9C would be channeled into feed or non-food industrial use. USDA also recommended that the seed companies provide the verification information to customers when customers ask for it.

"Every corn grower needs to take reasonable precautions to avoid StarLink appearing in the 2001 crop. Insisting on the USDA-recommended seed testing plan is the first step in assuring the integrity of the 2001 harvest," Yoder said.

This year the elevator moved more than 3.5 million bushels of corn to customers in the region.

At peak from mid-October to the end of November, the operation has as many as 20 trucks hauling out grain per day.

The business has six trucks, three on full-time lease and four others are used by full-time owner/operators.

When the business began, said Ann Risser, the family used "one driver and one bin," she said, with a laugh. "We had no clue."

But since the Norman Wood Bridge opened up York County regions, the grain business blossomed "beyond our wildest expectations," Ann said.

When they began the business, Ann noted that they enjoyed the excitement of watching the Chicago Board of Trade (CBOT), and the challenge, she said, of buying and selling grain.

They also learned how to operate an elevator simply "hands-on," she said, with local mills.

Back then, Pennfield and Wenger and lots of smaller mills were busy, as they still are. Right away the family recognized "the best market in the country," said Brent Risser, who helps market and works on grain shipments.

"We're grain deficient here," said Ann. Livestock and poultry growout managers feed more animals than ever before in the region. And dairy farms are getting larger — 400-cow dairies are becoming more common.

Big dairies require more corn.

For corn growers, looking at futures pricing continues to be key to survivability.

The best deal occurred early last summer, when growers could sell October-November corn at $2.80 a bushel, after reports came out about a possible Midwest drought. Some growers decided to sit on their corn.

But others could have used the Loan Deficiency Payment (LDP) schedule, locked in the prices at $2.65-$2.80 per bushel, and obtained an additional 40 cents per bushel from the LDP schedule.

The LDP began at 35-40 cents per bushel but now is 4 cents per bushel on corn.

Many farmers don't take advantage of LDP because they view it as "welfare," noted Brent.

Actually, it's more like social security, Ann noted. Combining that with simple forward pricing in this area "works very, very well," she said.

Every day, Ann noted, when producers call, she tries to convince them of the importance of accepting LDP on the corn.

There are several important lessons, according to the grain provider. Growers should:

- Forward price as much as possible. There are several simple programs. Just talk to a grain elevator manager.
- Be disciplined, Ann noted. When a profit exists, take it, she said.
- Know what government programs are available and participate in them.
- Don't put corn in a bin and hope to get a good price for it.
- Be aware of where prices of feed commodities are going.

"It's the way we have to farm now," she said. "There's no other choice."

A quarter of a century ago, the Rissers saw a good opportunity in shelled corn, and soon took on soybeans and wheat. Twenty-five years ago, Ann noted, ear corn was taken in and shelled on the site.

But since, through mergers and consolidations, the grain pickup and delivery industry in the Northeast has been shrinking. Export buyers are drying up.

Yet large operators continue to supply the steady grain market in the region.

Brent noted that northern Maryland, including Harford and Baltimore County, has operators growing grain at 4,000-5,000 acres apiece. Stewartstown in southern York County is composed of almost entire grain farms, with few dairies left in the county, he noted.

The entire Risser enterprise employs 10 full-time. There are four full-time owner/operators, and additional hires take place in delivery season after harvest. "This year, anyone who called could get work," Ann said.

The Bloomsburg facility, Mainville Grain, sits on five acres with a 250,000- bushel capacity. Purchased in 1996, the facility accepts shelled corn, wheat, beans, and barley.

Another facility, Red Lion Grain Center, has a 650,000-bushel capacity. At harvest, it unloads about 120 trucks a day.

The Red Lion site, established in 1997, is also home to a custom formula fertilizer and corn, wheat, barley, alfalfa, and pasture seed business.

Overall for the business, busiest time of year is mid-September to mid-December, noted Ann. "There is no slow season," she said. The books reflect how busy it will be in the coming months, with many deliveries and pickups scheduled.

In season, about 200,000-300,000 bushels per week are delivered after harvest. That number drops to about 300,000-400,000 bushels per month in January.

In 1999, the year was a challenge, with low prices and drought, a double-edged sword. But Ann has seen worse. She remembers when President Jimmy Carter, in the mid-'70s, imposed a grain embargo, and corn prices dropped 20 cents in a day.

And now, where there were six grain exporters on the East Coast, it's down to one, noted Brent.

Although the free trade with China pact has removed trade barriers, it's hard to figure out what China will actually do, according to Ann.

Brazil and South America have "potential beyond belief," said Ann, to supply grain to the world. But the political and economic infrastructure there could limit their getting commodities to the world market.

The Bt corn controversy early last year turned out to be a "non-issue," said Ann for them and many other elevators. They never worried about having to partition the grains accordingly — something that most considered too great a challenge.

What scares Brent is the move to corporate land ownership and large-scale, one-company, fully integrated contracting.

Agriculture "still needs everybody," Ann said, from the small to large operator. "They need all of us."

For the first time last year, Ann and Mark took a week's vacation. They visited Nashville, Tenn. to see the sites "thanks to Brent and Deb," said Ann.

Mark, who helps with loading and unloading, "keeps everything running," Ann said. "He's a good millwright."

Brent is in charge of marketing, buying and selling of grain, unloading, and truck recordkeeping. He also operates the seed and fertilizer business in Red Lion.

Ann takes care of the office work and marketing.

Debbie takes care of the accounting and bookkeeping. "She's a good public relations person," Ann said.

Mark and Ann also have a son, Randy, with a master's degree in ag economics from the University of Minnesota. Randy is a business consultant in Manhattan, New York City. For Christmas, Ann said their son was designing a Risser Grain Website. In late November, Randy was busy at the Holtwood location, taking photos with a digital camera to place on the Website: www.rissergrain.com.

The business operates from 5:30 in the morning to 8 at night, every day except Sunday.

Corn Growers Must Make Extra Effort To Control Volunteer StarLink

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) is urging growers who planted StarLink hybrids last year to make the extra effort to control possible volunteer StarLink corn in 2001. That may mean rotating to another crop or growing an herbicide-tolerant hybrid that lets you control volunteer StarLink.

"The danger is volunteer StarLink corn pollinating surrounding non-StarLink corn plants, further compounding the problems of keeping StarLink out of the supply of U.S. corn," said Fred Yoder, Plain City, Ohio, farmer and chairman of the NCGA Biotech Working Group.

"Rotation is the best choice," he pointed out. "In an ideal situation for 2001, you'd rotate ground planted to StarLink last year into soybeans, oats, or some other crop that will allow you to find and destroy volunteer corn.

"But if you're locked into growing corn-on-corn you need to plant herbicide-tolerant hybrids that let you eliminate StarLink volunteers," Yoder said.

The other control options are to grow either glyphosate (Roundup Ready) tolerant hybrids or imidazolinone (IMI) Clearfield tolerant hybrids and then use those herbicides to kill volunteer corn and other weeds.

However, NCGA is warning farmers about the use of Roundup Ready hybrids to control StarLink volunteers. "Roundup Ready corn is not yet approved for export to the European Union and is restricted from some domestic wet-milling markets," Yoder emphasized. "Check your primary corn market before selecting this control option.

"Planting glufosinate (Liberty Link) tolerant hybrids or using conventional corn herbicides on StarLink ground will not control volunteers, because StarLink contains the LibertyLink gene," he said. "Also, you'll need to check with your seed dealer to see whether the StarLink hybrids you planted last year were stacked with IMI. If they were, you can't control volunteer StarLink with an IMI hybrid."

The recommendation on controlling StarLink volunteers is in addition to NCGA's recent statement encouraging growers to plant seed that has been tested for Cry9C, the StarLink protein.

PMCGA Announces 5-Acre Contest Results

2000 PENNSYLVANIA CORN CLUB SUMMARY

The 2000 season was a welcome improvement over 1999 for many producers. Many folks around the state reported fine yields and our report this year reflects some of the best fields that were measured. Top yields like this don't happen just by chance. They are the result of careful planning and top notch management throughout the season.

We made a few changes to the rules this year based on input from our PMCGA board of directors. For a few classes that meant we would have to do without three year champions for two years.

Even with the generally good weather we had, there were a few stress factors that limited yields of some of our entrants. The cool weather limited grain fill in some areas. In other areas stalk lodging was severe and limited yields. In other areas a dry August put a ceiling on yield performance.

Thanks to everyone who contributed to this effort - producers, extension agents, crop consultants, and seedsmen. I'd also like to especially thank Mark Antle, who works with me on this program for pulling this years data together while I was out of the office.

21st Century Commission Offers Recommendations To Congress

The House Agriculture Committee began its farm bill hearings with testimony from the Commission on 21st Century Production Agriculture Jan. 31.

Created by the Federal Agricultural Improvement and Reform (FAIR) Act of 1996, the commission is charged with the measurement of mid-term impact on production flexibility, economic risk by farm size and region, food security, farmland values, producer income, a documentation of regulatory relief, tax relief and trade policies.

In testimony before Congress, the Commission recommended a continuation of the fixed AMTA payments, the adoption of an additional counter-cyclical income support program, and retaining the current marketing assistance loan program (LDPs and MLGs).

Corn Grower Grassroots Action Halts Issuance Of Oxygenate Waiver

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Corn Growers, its 32,000 members and concerned members of Congress can take satisfaction in a job well done.

They persuaded President Clinton not to grant a waiver allowing California an exemption from the federal Reformulated Gasoline (RFG) oxygen requirement. NCGA and other ethanol proponents feared Clinton would grant the waiver during his final hours in office.

California officials sought the waiver as a means of eliminating the oxygenate MTBE from the state's gasoline supplies. NCGA has been submitting technical information for more than a year showing there is no scientific justification for granting the California waiver.

NCGA and its grassroots members argued effectively that issuing the waiver is bad public policy because:

CORN TALK NEWS
PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOC., INC.

- Adequate supplies of clean-burning ethanol exist to fully supply the California market.
- The exemption would adversely affect air quality in California.
- Investment in new ethanol plants would be jeopardized due to the uncertainty this waiver would generate.

"Granting California a waiver never made any sense. I can understand why state officials wanted to remove MTBE from their gasoline supplies, but the waiver would have unfairly hurt ethanol. California would have gotten dirtier air, and the good reputation of ethanol would have been slandered," said NCGA President Lee Klein, a farmer from Battle Creek, Neb.

Klein lauded those congressional members who conveyed the corn and ethanol industry's concerns to the Clinton Administration, particularly Sens. Tom Harkin (D-IA), Tom Daschle (D-SD), and Dick Durbin (D-IL) for extraordinary service on behalf of their farmer constituents.

The National Corn Growers Association mission is to create and increase opportunities for corn growers in a changing world and to enhance corn's profitability and usage. NCGA represents more than 30,000 members, 25 affiliated state corn grower organizations, and the interests of hundreds of thousands of growers who contribute to state checkoff programs.

House, Senate Action On River Legislation Is Win For National Corn Growers

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) applauded passage by the U.S. House and Senate of the 2001 Energy and Water Development Appropriations Bill that includes important river-related provisions championed by the NCGA.

The House passed the bill 301-118, and the Senate passed the bill 57-37.

"The NCGA has worked hard for the river-related provisions in the bill," said NCGA President Lee Klein of Battle Creek, Neb. "Congress obviously understands the needs of America's farmers when it comes to our country's rivers and the important role river navigation plays in the movement of grain and other agricultural commodities."

Among the provisions of the bill, NCGA supports are $2.1 million for the Upper Mississippi River Navigation Study, and $4.7 million for preconstruction design and engineering on five locks on the Upper Mississippi River and two on the Illinois River. This bill also includes an important provision regarding the management of the Missouri River.

Congressional passage of the Missouri River management provision (Section 103) put to rest, for now, a battle between Sen. Kit Bond (R-MO) and Sen. Tom Daschle (D-SD). An amendment sponsored by Daschle would have given the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service authority to proceed with implementing a "spring rise" on the Missouri River next year. But Sen. Bond, primary sponsor of the Section 103 language, argued that a spring surge or "controlled flood" could bring disastrous floods on the Missouri River and disrupt navigation on both the Missouri and Mississippi rivers.

"Again, Congress recognized and validated Sen. Bond's concerns," Klein said. "However, there is a good possibility that President Clinton will veto the bill simply because of election year politics regarding the Section 103 provision. NCGA will push to see that the president does not veto a bill containing language that he has signed four times previously."

Klein also applauded Congress for appropriating sought-after funding targeted for the Upper Mississippi River Navigation Study and improvements on the Mississippi and Illinois rivers.

"It is vital that Congress and the Administration focus on our deteriorating river infrastructure," said Klein. "Without these necessary improvements, the United States stands to lose its competitive edge as the world's leading corn exporter to the emerging competition in countries like Brazil and Argentina."

Ag Industry Seeks Higher Funding In FY-2002

NCGA joined a coalition of ag industry groups as a signatory to a letter urging higher levels of funding for ag programs during FY-2002 and beyond. The letter, addressed to Sen. Lugar and Rep. Combest, requesting their help in the FY-2002 Budget Resolution.

"Specifically, we respectfully request you to urge the Budget Committee to provide additional funding in FY-2002 and beyond equal to at least the same level of emergency economic assistance which applied to the 2000 crop," the letter stated. "To facilitate the development of new legislation, it is important for the budget resolution to provide sufficient funding to enable the authorizing committees to develop effective agricultural policies."

Funding of the farm bill will be one of the key issues facing the budget committees this year.

Corn Growers Continue Responsible Biotech Management

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The nation's corn growers continue their responsible stewardship of crops from biotechnology, the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) announced recently.

A recent survey shows corn growers overwhelmingly support insect resistance management (IRM) plans designed to ensure continued effectiveness of Bt corn.

IRM plans are designed to keep the insects from developing resistance by providing a "refuge" of conventional corn where susceptible insects can breed.

Farmers are required to plant refuges of at least 20 percent of their acreage with conventional corn in the Corn Belt and 50 percent in the Cotton Belt.

In the survey, more than 90 percent of the growers said IRM plans are important and believed they planted an appropriate refuge.

"The survey confirms that farmers are good stewards of technology and, when given appropriate information, they will do the right thing," said Fred Yoder, Plain City, Ohio, farmer and chairman of the NCGA Biotech Working Group. "Now as most farmers put the finishing touches on their 2001 planting decisions, this would be an ideal time to remember the IRM requirements."

The survey showed 87 percent of growers planted a refuge of 20 percent or more. Another five percent of growers planted a smaller refuge, in compliance with previous standards.

For crop year 2000, growers also were required to plant their refuge within one-half mile of the Bt field or within one-quarter mile if they maintain the option to treat the refuge. The survey showed 82 percent of the growers met this distance requirement. Collectively, 71 percent met both the size and distance requirements.

The survey covered more than 500 growers in the Corn Belt and Cotton Belt, all of whom planted Bt corn in 2000. An independent marketing research firm conducted the study for the Agricultural Biotechnology Stewardship Technical Committee (ABSTC), in cooperation with the NCGA.

ABSTC is a group of companies involved in the research, development and stewardship of ag biotechnology products. Participating companies include Aventis CropScience USA LP, Dow AgroSciences LLC, DuPont, Monsanto Co., Mycogen Seeds, Pioneer Hi-Bred International Inc., and Syngenta Seeds Inc.

Annual survey reports are required under the Bt Corn Industry IRM Plan, developed by ABSTC in cooperation with NCGA and adopted by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency in January 2000.

NCGA and ABSTC member companies are helping corn growers understand resistance management requirements for the 2001 season through:

- Videotapes and brochures for seed dealers to provide better information on "refuges" of conventional corn that must be planted near fields of Bt corn
- Increased communications through agricultural media
- Additional information on the NCGA's Website
- Increased communication through the extension service.

Use Crop Marketing, Insurance To Protect Profits

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — The corn market forecast year looked pretty bearish to one economic forecaster in January this year.

If so, the earlier you sell in a bearish market, "the better off you are," said Bob Utterback.

Utterback, a registered commodity broker and president of Utterback Marketing Services, Inc., (UMS) in New Richmond, Ind., spoke near the end of January about market strategies.

Utterback addressed about 112 corn growers and agri-industry representatives at the "Decisions: For The Real Beginning of the 21st Century" Conference at the Days Inn and Conference Center near Allentown.

Sponsored by the Lehigh Valley Grain Marketing Club and Penn State, the crops marketing conference looked to ways to ensure profitability by looking at ways to make crop investment insurance work for the grower.

For growers, "D-Day" is March 31, when the USDA releases its expected plantings report.

For the planting year, one of four patterns can develop:

- A slow seller's nightmare. This is a condition in which there is too much supply, too little demand, adequate planting, no significant weather-related yield event (such as drought or too much rain), no seasonal rally, and a sell-off all year. Too much supply and too little demand are huge culprits and bear down on prices.

A producer has to operate like an elevator — that is, buy grain on a wide basis and sell the carry. However, too many producers hold their grain, expecting a flat price rally that hardly ever materializes.

"It's very difficult for farmers to sell carry," Utterback said.

- Pattern 2, a seasonal rally into the spring, normal yield, hard break into early harvest — a time of uncertainty and anxiety, noted Utterback. "We need to be better marketers," said Utterback. Investing in crop insurance is key.
- Pattern 3, counterseasonal. This includes a normal spring, a weather rally, a sell-off on assumption of good yield, late season weather event, and a major counterseasonal fall event. Such a period allows the market to be "very violent, very emotional," Utterback said.

Utterback noted that in January at the conference, he sees a drought year in 2001. He looks to not only this year, but what he plans in 2002 planting season as a result.

"A marketing plan is a plan for failure," he said. "It addresses what I'm going to do if I'm wrong."

Producers can no longer hold onto corn, waiting for a flat price late rally. They have to think through a marketing plan that incorporates crop insurance, proper forward pricing (price hedging included), and use loan deficiency payments, or LDPs.

- Pattern 4, start slow and rally hard. There won't be a repeat of the 1996 "bullish" event, according to Utterback.

A grower can't simply plant corn, harvest it, and wait to sell it. Growers should:

- Aggressively use crop insurance programs to assure yield.
- Focus on seasonal sales for corn.
- If target price is not hit by desired time, move to automatic format.
- Focus on defending a short (sell) position against a weather event. Producers should assume that every time they decide to sell, that decision could be wrong, and they should devise a "battle plan" to ensure they get the best price.
- Focus on protecting LDP next fall.
- Move grain as soon as basis narrows.

More and more, producers will have to delegate the work of protecting the crop price to services and brokerages.

For growers, the good news is that corn usage is increasing; China continues to be a major uncertainty in the market; and for prices to be explosive in 2001 for U.S. producers, "we need to see a significant reduction in domestic (U.S) corn," according to Utterback.

The lack of fertilizer because of the natural gas crunch will mean less yields and perhaps improved prices.

Growers should remember that just because they produce a crop, producers have to ask themselves "what does our client want, not what we want," said Utterback.

Utterback's company, UMS, predicts 2001 will have 78 million acres in corn, 136.5 bushel per acre yield, with a supply of 11.5 billion bushels. Estimated U.S. cash price is $2.20 a bushel.

CORN TALK NEWS

PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOC., INC.

An adequate corn supply exists now, but bullish issues are developing. If demand remains strong, acres should drop, and any yields beyond 137 bushels per acre should result in a pattern 3 or 4 for corn.

Utterback predicts a high corn market this year.

For an old crop in storage, growers should wait to sell the inventory until April or May, but get in a position to sell 2001 crop right away.

Some tips for planning:

- Target price at $2.60-2.65 per bushel.
- Prepare a defensive strategy, through puts or calls, to ensure the price you want.
- Obtain crop insurance.
- Make basis decision, limit risks on calls.
- Obtain disaster insurance.
- Develop an LDP strategy.

"We are as bullish as we can be, at least since 1995," Utterback noted.

MTBE Legislation Would Not Strike Oxygenate Requirement

A Senate bill banning MTBE would not rewrite clean air laws, and could significantly boost the market potential for ethanol. Sen. Peter Fitzgerald (R-IL) reintroduced the "MTBE Elimination Act" on Feb. 6. The legislation would eradicate the toxic fuel additive within three years, and contains a number of provisions specifying gasoline labeling and environmental monitoring requirements. "We should eliminate MTBE without sacrificing air quality, and I believe we can do that by promoting ethanol as an environmentally friendlier substitute in the clean air program...

Proposals to repeal the oxygenate requirement attack the wrong problem. The problem is not the oxygenate requirement, the problem is MTBE," according to a Fitzgerald news release.

A USDA study projected that a nationwide ban on MTBE-followed by replacement with ethanol in the country's gasoline supplies-could boost farm income by $1 billion annually and create 13,000 new jobs in rural America.

Weed Control Product Formulation Changes (Loux)

Balance Pro 4L is a liquid formulation of isoxaflutole (Balance), which may reduce tank-mixing problems that occasionally occurred with the 75WDG formulation.

Canopy SP 58.3DF replaces Canopy 75DF. The ratio of chlorimuron to metribuzin is unchanged, but product use rates increase due to the lower percentage of active ingredient in the formulation. Dupont may be phasing out all Canopy formulations, with Canopy XL as the replacement.

Harmony GT 75DF replaces Pinnacle 25DF, and is labeled for soybeans (1/12-ounces per acre) and wheat (0.5 to 0.6-ounces per acre). This will reduce the cost of lambsquarters control in soybeans, and provide another option for control of wild garlic and winter annual weeds in wheat.

Hornet WDG is a 78.5 percent active ingredient formulation that replaces Hornet 86DF. Common use rates are now 3, 4, and 5-ounce per acre, instead of 2.4, 3.2, and 4-ounce per acre.

Gramoxone Max replaces Gramoxone Extra, and the new formulation contains three pounds paraquat per gallon. Product use rates are thus reduced slightly compared to the previous 2.5 per gallon formulation.

Roundup Ultra Max replaces Roundup Ultra. The amount of glyphosate acid equivalent per gallon increases from three to 3.75 pounds per gallon, with a reduction in the amount of product per acre.

Glyphosate, Glyphosate, And More Glyphosate (Loux)

A number of glyphosate products are currently available, including Roundup Ultra Max, Roundup Original, Roundup Ultra Dry, Glyphomax, Glyphomax Plus, Touchdown 5, and others. Most are labeled for preplant burndown in any crop and postemergence use in Roundup Ready soybeans, but not all are labeled for postemergence use in Roundup Ready corn.

In OSU research, few differences in weed control have been observed when comparing the various glyphosate products. However, differences among formulations may result in differences in rainfastness, surfactant recommendations, or control under adverse conditions. For example, the rainfast interval indicated on the Roundup Ultra Max label is one hour, while other glyphosate product labels specify longer rainfast intervals. Some products have optimized surfactant packages in the formulation. This may not improve control compared to other glyphosate products applied with high-quality surfactants. However, choice of surfactant may influence control under certain conditions when the applicator has to decide which surfactant to use.

Comparing the amount of active ingredient in glyphosate products can be difficult. The true indicator of the activity of a glyphosate formulation is often not the total pounds of glyphosate shown on the label, but rather the pounds of glyphosate acid (or acid equivalent). This is the figure that should be considered when comparing the rates and costs of glyphosate formulations. The form of glyphosate found in Touchdown is a slight variation on the original ghyphosate molecule, but has essentially the same specific activity or effectiveness per pound of glypnosate acid. The following table shows the amount of product required to provide the equivalent of 0.75 pounds glyphosate acid, or one quart of Roundup Ultra.

Product/formulation Rate for 0.75 pound glyphosate acid.

Roundup Ultra 3S — 32-ounces

Roundup Ultra Max 3.75S — 26-ounces

Roundup Original 3S — 32-ounces

Glyphomax/Glyphomax Plus 3S — 32-ounces

Touchdown IQ — 32-ounces

Other premix products that contain glyphosate include:

Backdraft (BASF), a premix of imazaquin (Scepter) plus glyphosate for control of emerged weeds and residual control of broadleaf weeds. This product is targeted primarily for preplant or preemergence application to any type of soybean, but can be applied postemergence on Roundup Ready soybeans. The rate of glyphosate in this product may be too low for many burndown situations — the 1.5 quart per acre rate provides an amount of glyphosate equivalent to 13-ounces of Roundup Ultra Max (or one pint of Roundup Ultra).

Extreme (BASF), a premix of imazethapyr (Pursuit) plus glyphosate for postemergence plus residual weed control in Roundup Ready soybeans. This product may improve velvetleaf control, compared to glyphosate alone. The residual control from the imazethapyr may also help control annual grasses, black nightshade, and a few other weeds that can emerge after postemergence applications. The use rate provides the equivalent of a labeled rate of Pursuit plus 20-ounces per acre of Roundup Ultra Max.

Ready Master ATZ (Monsanto), a premix of glyphosate (Roundup Ultra Max) plus atrazine. This product can be applied preemergence on any corn hybrid, and postemergence on Roundup Ready hybrids only. The two-quart rate provides the equivalent of one pound per acre of atrazine plus 26-ounces of Roundup Ultra Max.

Nitrogen Topdress For Wheat (Lentz)

Soon it will be time to apply nitrogen as wheat fields begin to greenup. With the high cost of nitrogen and low grain prices, producers are looking for ways to get the most out of their fertilizer program. It is tempting to arbitrarily decrease nitrogen rates without considering the impact. Wheat yields will be greatly affected without adequate nitrogen, but what is adequate?

Nitrogen recommendations for Ohio wheat are based on the following rate equation: 40 + [1.75 × (yield potential 50)]

This equation shows that a realistic yield goal is the first place to consider rate adjustments. For example, if the yield goal has been 100 bushels per acre, but yields have actually been 90, then the crop has received 20 pounds that were not needed for yield. If the goal had been 100 bushels and average yields

In the Degelman tradition of quality rock removal equipment, here is the RR1500 rock rake, another example of Degelman's continuing commitment to excellence.

The RR1500 rock rake includes a unique auto-fold system which provides safe, easy transport no wider than most tractors (8 feet in transport position) with full use of the 14 foot width in the working position. And with hydraulic angling, it can take full advantage of the 10 to 30 degree angling range.

Degelman Rock Rakes are excellent machines for grooming fairways and conditioning soil for the construction of golf courses. It leaves a beautiful final finish preparing the course for seeding. They are also used for reclaiming gravel on gravel roads. And the heavy duty construction and quality workmanship means that it is built to last.

Crop Observation

have been 80, 35 pounds of extra nitrogen had been applied each year.

Another area for potential savings is to credit fall nitrogen applications. For example, 130 pounds of nitrogen would be required for a yield potential of 100 bushels. If 30 pounds of nitrogen had been applied in the fall, only 100 additional pounds should be applied in the spring. If the yield potential would have been 90 or 80 in the same scenario, the spring nitrogen rate should be 80 and 60 pounds, respectively. Credits are not given for previous crops. A legume, such as soybeans, will eventually provide available nitrogen to the soil but often too late for the wheat crop. The above rates are based on mineral soils, which have both one-five percent organic matter and adequate drainage. Nitrogen rates would need to be reduced on soils with high organic matter to decrease the risk of lodging.

Besides the rate of nitrogen, application time is also important. In most years, nitrogen may be applied between early March and early April. A split spring application program may be a benefit in poorly drained fields that are prone to nitrogen loss. For these programs, it is important that the first application occurs soon after initial green-up and the second application at initial jointing (Feekes Growth Stage 6). The time of application is not as critical in a single topdress (providing some nitrogen was applied in the fall), but applications should be made after initial green-up and before the second visible node on the stem.

Most sources of nitrogen are satisfactory for wheat, but price and availability may limit some products this year. Urea and 28 percent solution (urea-ammonium nitrate) are often the most common. Urea has the least potential to cause damage to the crop. Damage is generally insignificant from broadcast applications of 28 percent solution applied early, but the potential for damage increases as the crop matures. Dribble band applications will minimize damage from 28 percent solutions. Urea-ammonium nitrate solutions will have some nitrogen available immediately at application time; urea will have a short lag as it converts to ammonium and nitrate forms of nitrogen. Generally, 28 percent solutions have the greatest potential for nitrogen losses since part of it is immediately in the nitrate form. Urea may have volatilization losses if temperatures are exceedingly warm.

In summary, except where water has been standing, the wheat crop looks well at this time and should have the potential for optimal yields. Carefully, consider reducing nitrogen rates. Leaving out sulfur and unproven amendments would be a better management decision than making large reductions in nitrogen rates (note, low CEC sands may need sulfur).

Ethanol Task Force Seeks To Increase Demand, Awareness For Ethanol

The NCGA Ethanol Task Force met Feb. 1-2 in St. Louis. Key among the task force's accomplishments was discussion and planning of NCGA principles for ethanol legislation in the 107th Congress.

The group also reviewed the national marketing plan, which is in the development stage; reviewed ethanol policy comments received at the recent Policy and Priority Conference in St. Louis; heard a brief updated Valentine Radford's progress in the marketing plan discovery process; discussed an ethanol industry management committee structure; discussed NCGA's ethanol objectives and mission in regard to preparing a business plan; and determined direction/key points for the task force's meeting and presentation at Commodity Classic.

more prone to yield losses from this leaf disease than others due to the predominating production practices and environmental conditions. Generally, the severity of the disease is related to reduced tillage, especially in fields planted continuously to corn. During years with exceptionally warm and humid weather, gray leaf spot can become important throughout the state as in 1995.

Control of the disease has been achieved through the use of resistant hybrids, tillage to destroy corn residues and adequate crop rotation with soybeans, wheat or forage crops. Where conservation tillage is used, a two year rotation away from corn is necessary because the fungus survives in corn residues left on the soil surface for up to two years.

Fungicides are available for use on corn to control GLS, but the economics of corn production have not permitted common use of these materials except on sweet corn, pop corn or seed corn. Fungicide applications have been evaluated in Ohio for control of GLS on field corn. During the growing seasons of 1996 through 2000, the yield response due to fungicide application on susceptible hybrids ranged from two to 32 bushels per acre. Obviously, the greatest yield responses occurred during years with highest disease pressure (1996 = 27 bushels per acre, 1997 = 2 bushels per acre, 1998 = 32 bushels per acre, 1999 = 19 bushels per acre, 2000 = 2 bushels per acre).

There are two fungicides labeled for control of GLS on corn, Tilt 3.6 EC and Quadris 2.08 SC. Tilt (2.0 - 4.0-ounces per acre) is labeled for control of several foliar diseases through end of silking (R2 stage of growth). Quadris Flowabale Fungicide recently received a federal label for control of several foliar diseases on corn at 6.2-9.2 fluid ounce per acre applied at disease onset, and can be until seven days of harvest. Other directions and restrictions are described on the labels.

Both of these fungicides are labeled for more than one application during the growing season, but due to the relatively low price of corn, multiple applications during the growing season is cost prohibitive. In Ohio and other states, two applications of Tilt or Quadris has provided better disease control than one, but in most tests there was no significant additional yield benefit from the second application. It appears that the most economical use of these products on susceptible hybrids is a single application. Tilt has provided the best results when applied at the V14 to R2 growth stage using the 4.0 fluid ounce per acre rate. Quadris appears to benefit from a slightly earlier application. Apply Quadris from V10- V14 growth stage using 9.2 fluid ounce per acre. The label suggests that an adjuvant be added to improve coverage. When using ground equipment add drop nozzles to improve coverage of the leaves at and above the ear. We recommend treating susceptible hybrids; not hybrids with some degree of resistance to GLS.

In several (though not all) tests, Quadris provided superior disease control to that provided by Tilt. Thus, in terms of efficacy against gray leaf spot, Quadris may prove to be the better choice. However, because Quadris is used at an application rate over twice that of Tilt, the per-acre cost of Quadris is about twice as high as that of Tilt.

Corn Growers Applaud U.S. — Japan Quality Assurance Agreement For Food Corn

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) welcomed today's report that USDA and Japan's Ministry of Health and Welfare have agreed on a standard method of testing and exporting of U.S. corn for food to Japan.

Under the agreement, Japanese importers will accept U.S. corn that has met quality assurance guidelines for testing, handling, transportation, and identity-preservation from elevators to export ships. "Our sampling and testing will be acceptable to our Japanese customers, and that returns certainty to the marketplace," said NCGA President Lee Klein, a farmer from Battle Creek, Neb.

StarLink hybrids have been approved for feed use in the U.S., but have not yet been cleared for food use. In Japan, StarLink is not approved for food use. A feed approval is pending in Japan.

"We applaud the hard work of U.S. and Japanese officials who negotiated their way through a very complex set of regulatory issues and different testing systems to achieve a solution that answers the needs of each sovereign trading partner," Klein said, noting that NCGA Executive Vice President and CEO Rick Tolman participated in September meetings between Japanese government officials and USDA. Those discussions laid the groundwork for the testing agreement.

"This is an indication of the trust the Japanese have in the ability of the U.S. grain marketing system to employ a voluntary quality assurance process that meets their nation's regulatory requirements," Klein said.

NCGA expects the next developments will be feed use approval of StarLink in Japan and EPA food use approval of StarLink in the U.S.

Ag Community Meets With Senator Harkin On Farm Bill

NCGA coordinated a meeting with Sen. Harkin (D-IA), his key agriculture staff and several members of commodity and livestock organizations in Washington, D.C. He spoke on a wide range of issues including emergency payments, the commodity title of the next farm bill and the tax package.

Sen. Harkin also discussed special interests, including the conservation title of the next farm bill and, specifically, his Conservation Security Act. He also addressed issues such as value added and rural development. NCGA representatives are committed to work with Sen. Harkin and the agriculture committees on many of these issues as development of the farm bill progresses. The House and Senate Agriculture Committees have already initiated hearings on the farm policy.

Terry Wolf Representing NCGA As C-Far Chairman

Terry Wolf of Homer, Ill., has been named chairman of the board of directors of the National Coalition for Food and Agricultural Research (National C-FAR). The coalition is a newly founded, broad-based stakeholder coalition of food, agriculture, nutrition, natural resources and conservation organizations with the goals of increasing the investment in food and ag research by increasing awareness of the research's importance and value to the general public.
